Ballou Defends District's Study Of Communism

Instruction Is Needed to Offset Propaganda, School Head Says.

He Answers Query Of Legion Official

Fetty Assails Replies; Capital Group Plans Action in Court.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, yesterday vigorously defended the study of communism in the public schools of the National Capital.

Only by giving students factual information about political, economic and social matters, Dr. Ballou said, can American schools combat the "insidious propaganda now menacing democracy."

The propagandists, Dr. Ballou asserted, frequently aim their appeals at young people, and, consequently, the schools must strike back by explaining what communism is.

Dr. Ballou's statement constituted an answer to a series of questions submitted to him Thursday by E. Brook Fetty, second vice commander of the American Legion of the State of Maryland.

"Loophole," Says Fetty.

Replying to Dr. Ballou's statement in a radio broadcast last night, Fetty accused the school superintendent of having "looked for a loophole or a place to crawl under the fence." He added:

"Under the guise of wanting to give the children of the Nation's Capital the facts about all forms of government, he proposes to require your child and mine to study this destructive setup which is a stench in the nostrils of all 100 per cent Americans.

Fetty, in a letter to Dr. Ballou Thursday, asked the school head to answer 12 questions concerning communism instruction in schools. In his answer, Dr. Ballou said that elementary facts of communism were studied as a form of government. He added:

"I know of no racial troubles—either current or anticipated—which are as dangerous to American institutions as the insidious propaganda regarding communism."

Gen. Fries Tells Plans.

Meanwhile, efforts to halt teaching of communism facts reached threats of court action. The District Public School Association announced an injunction would be sought and the comptroller general will be asked to withhold salary checks from teachers who present the subject to their pupils.

Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries, U. S. A., retired, president of the school association, said a committee would be named to draft necessary legal papers unless other action is taken. He said the American Legion plans

F. T. C. Report Purports to Show $350,000 Sent to F. G. Bonfils.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday made public records—immediately denied—intended to show that the Colorado Interstate Gas Co. paid $350,000 to effect a change in editorial policy of the Denver Post toward a natural gas franchise.

A sworn report by Lewis G. Prichard, a commission examiner, showed that after $350,000 was earmarked by the company for F. G. Bonfils, former editor of the Post, now dead, that paper dropped a campaign against introduction of natural gas into Colorado.

The report set forth that the payment was made by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey in October, 1927, to J. B. Luse, "then treasurer of the Colorado Interstate Gas Co. and employed by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey."

"Nothing was found in the record of Colorado Interstate Gas Co. to indicate what J. B. Luse did with the $350,000 that was paid to him," Prichard's report said.

The commission later placed in the records what it said was a photostatic copy of the check the Standard Oil Co. gave to Luse.

Two affidavits by officials who formerly worked with Bonfils were introduced to refute the accusations in Prichard's report.

"Palpably Improbable."

Denver, Oct. 29.—The Denver Post today published a statement calling a Federal Trade Commission examiner's report that $350,000 was paid in 1927 to influence the editorial policy of the newspaper "palpably insufficient and inherent-

Marine Officer Crashes in Rain

Lieut. Benjamin F. Kaiser, Marine Corps flier, crashed in a small biplane near Manassas, Va., just after 6 p. m. yesterday. He was bruised and cut and suffered possible internal injuries.

Shortly before the crash residents of Manassas heard a plane circling above the town in the murky rain. The motor was missing and the pilot apparently was seeking a landing place.

Nearly 100 persons drove their automobiles to the emergency landing field just outside of the town. Headlights were turned on the field to illuminate it for Kaiser's landing.

Lieut. Kaiser was unable to reach the landing field. His gasoline supply was exhausted. He put the plane down on a field in the nearby Portner estate. In landing the plane struck a tree and was demolished.

Townspeople drove Lieut. Kaiser to Manassas, where a call was put in for an ambulance from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia to bring the officer to a Washington hospital.

The lieutenant told persons at Manassas that he was flying a Navy ship from San Diego to the Naval Air Station here.

Jury to Try Sweitzer Almost Completed

Chicago, Oct. 29 (AP).—State and defense attorneys tonight predicted a jury would be completed Wednesday to try former County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer on charges of withholding $414,129 in public money.

Eight jurors were accepted in the second day of the trial. Prosecutors used up six of their ten peremptory challenges and the defense three.

Resignation of FERA Flood Illinois Office

Rockford, Ill., Oct. 29 (AP).—Resignations from the relief rolls of Winnebago County are deluging Prudence Ross, the director, she reported today.

She attributed it to the recent action of the grand jury in indicting two relief clients on charges of obtaining aid while gainfully employed.

Hopkins Sees Direct Relief End in Month

Farm-to-Market Road Building Relied on to Lift Load.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday discussed the present works-relief program and the future of relief with his two works chiefs, Harry L. Hopkins and Secretary Ickes. Relief is expected to be the largest item in the new budget now under consideration, but Hopkins said after the conference that there were no definite plans and that the future was in the hands of Congress.

Hopkins assured the President the Government would be able to stop all direct relief next month and repeated his prediction that the "big bulge" in the process of putting people to work will come within the next two or three weeks.

One of the reasons for the "bulge," he said, would be the start of the long-planned farm-to-market highway-construction program, designed to provide improved feeder highways for hundreds of thousands of farmers. The imminence of winter is expected to hamper this work in the North, leaving many relief "clients" in small towns and rural districts without active work. The security-wage program, however, guarantees a worker, once he gets on the job, steady wages even though weather may prevent his working.

67,000 Jobs a Day.

Hopkins pointed out that there is about $500,000,000 of relief money in State treasuries available for use in taking care of persons who may be "left over" after WPA jobs are filled. He said there naturally would be a residue of employables in some sections, while there would not be sufficient workers to fill all the jobs available in others. Delaware already has reported a shortage of unskilled workers available for relief jobs.

If Hopkins is to reach his goal of having 3,500,000 persons to work next month, he must put men to work at the rate of 67,000 a day. Latest available figures indicate that the relief program still is about 2,000,000 jobs short of its goal. Outside the CCC, fewer than 1,000,000 persons have been put to work, although it was originally intended that the goal should be reached by November 1.

Hopkins is faced now with making direct relief grants for at least part of November to 42 States. Despite the prediction that the Government would be "out of the relief business" by November 1, Federal relief has been discontinued in only six States.

Relief Far Over Billion.

Hopkins recently predicted that the program for the next fiscal year will not include direct relief. He said yesterday he expected the relief load would be appreciably lower next year, in spite of the fact that most of the workers now being re-employed in private industry are not coming from relief rolls, but from the out-of-work group that is not on relief.

In spite of the activities of WPA, PWA, the Rural Settlement Administration and other Government employment agencies, the Government spent more for direct relief during the first ten months of this year than it spent for the same purpose during a similar period last year. The relief grants for the first ten months this year totaled $1,228,716,835, as compared with $1,013,069,738 during the first ten months of last year.

Ickes expressed the opinion that Government subsidies are neces-

Galmica Staves Off Bootless To Win 4th at Laurel; Pays $7

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 29.—The Shandon Farm, which raises good horses instead of good vegetables, sent a well-proportioned 2-year-old to the post here this afternoon and the youngster, Galmica, turned in a fine performance to win the fourth race, the outstanding event of a rather flat program.

Three-quarters of a length behind and, from all appearances, willing to admit defeat, came Bootless, representing Col. E. R. Bradley. The runner-up had a task to hold second money safe from the fast-closing Star Scout, racing for Mrs. A. B. Hancock.

Despinte a drizzle throughout the afternoon, the track was fast when the six juveiles marched to the post. With the field under way on the mile-and-70-yard journey, Eastward flattered his backers by going to the front, followed by Army and Navy. Bootless was third and Galmica fourth as the young horses banked around the turn for the back stretch.

Both jockeys—Meade on Bootless and Richard on Galmica—seemed content to allow the leaders to run themselves into submission. At the far turn Eastward and Army and Navy began to falter and Bootless and Galmica moved up. The rivals

'Midget' Foils Law And Dies by Poison

By the United Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—The misdirected cunning of Henry J. (Midget) Fernekes, wily bank bandit, who had no ordinary vices, foiled the law again today.

A slim, smiling young man, who used excellent grammar and spoke in a modulated voice—a sort of latter-day Gerald Chapman—he took poison in his jail cell and died en route to Cook County Hospital. Authorities said he had killed three men besides himself.

Before he went to bed last night, the "Midget," still denying his identity in spite of fingerprints, told guards he never would return to Joliet Penitentiary, from which he escaped last August in a manner that led to the discharge of four gullible guards who had directed him to the prison gate, thinking him a visitor.

He was recaptured yesterday by Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the State's attorney's police.

Guard Scents Stunt, Smiles.

Sergt. John Barry looked in at him and grinned. The cunning "Midget" doubtless was feigning a fit, the first step to another escape attempt. Nevertheless, Barry summoned physicians. The stethoscope showed Fernekes' heart was scarcely beating.

The police started him for Bridewell Hospital but noticed in the ambulance that his face was changing to fantastic colors and ordered the driver to County Hospital. He died before they got there.

Before he died Fernekes twisted his face into the semblance of a grin and said:

"There'll be no show-up for me tonight, cops."

It was hours before police found where Fernekes concealed the poison, a secret pocket in his trousers, in which was a tiny vial.

Fernekes, born at Valparaiso, Ind., in 1896, was a puzzle both to the underworld and police. The underworld could not understand his ab-

Widow of Edison Will Wed Today

To Be Bride of Edward E. Hughes, of Franklin, Pa.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Mina Miller Edison, widow of Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, will be married tomorrow to Edward E. Hughes, of Franklin, Pa.

The announcement said the ceremony would take place at noon in the former home of Mrs. Edison's father, Lewis Miller, at Chatauqua, N. Y.

Only members of the immediate families will attend the wedding. They will include Mr. and Mrs. John E. Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edison, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Edison, all of Llewellyn Park, West Orange, N. J.

Also, Mrs. Marion Oser, of New York City, a daughter of Mrs. Edison; Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Hughes and Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hughes, of Pittsburgh.

After their marriage, the couple plan to travel for several months. The announcement of their plans said they had not decided on their future residence.

Mr. Edison died in October, 1931.

Senator Norris' Friends Demand He Run Again

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 29 (AP).—Nebraska friends of Senator George W. Norris united today in a formal demand upon the congressional veteran to run for re-election. A nonpartisan committee was appointed at a meeting here to visit the Senator and "impress upon him the importance of running again."

Grief-Stricken Widow Leaps To Her Death

New York Socialite Ends Life in 7-Floor Plunge at Capital Hotel.

Mrs. Rosamond Batchelder Hodges, 38, New York society woman and widow of John K. Hodges, New York stock broker, leaped to her death yesterday from the seventh floor of the Washington Hotel, Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Plunging through a glass skylight, the body narrowly missed striking George Bush, hotel chef, and landed on the floor of the hotel's pantry. Mrs. Hodges was pronounced dead from a fractured skull by a physician from Emergency Hospital.

Shortly before 8 a. m. Mr. and Mrs. John L. Batchelder, parents of the woman, asleep in an adjoining room, were awakened by a loud crash and ran to their daughter's room, crying:

"Rosamond, Rosamond, are you all right?"

Her Death Note.

A note pinned to the pillow and the gaping hole in the roof below told them what had happened.

The note said:

"My death was inevitable—forgive me."

Mr. Batchelder, Beacon Hill, Boston coal merchant, told police their daughter had been in ill health and despondent since the death of her husband last July. She gave no sign of planning to take her life, however, her father said.

The family were on their way to the Leesburg Country Club in Loudoun County, Va. From there they were going to Florida. They arrived in Washington yesterday after Mrs. Hodges had left Saranac Lake, where she had been undergoing treatment.

Two Daughters in School.

Mrs. Hodges is survived by two daughters, Rosamond, 16, and Mary, 13, who are attending school in New York.

When found Mrs. Hodges was dressed for the street. Police said it looked as though she had leaped on an impulse. On her fingers there were diamond rings and she was wearing ear bobs. She was wearing gloves.

The body was released to an undertaker for shipment to New York last night after Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Paris Offers New Scheme To Halt War

Concessions of Land to Italy Are Reported Involved in Plan.

First Reaction Cool, But Optimism Is Voiced by Premier Laval.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 29.—The French bobbed up again today with a new scheme for settling the Italo-Ethiopian War before the League of Nations meets Thursday to enforce trade penalties against the Fascist government.

First international reaction was cool, but Premier Pierre Laval was reported to have shown "certain optimism" in a secret meeting of the Senate foreign relations committee late today.

The new plan, described as the result of conferences between experts on African affairs of the French and British foreign offices, was said to involve concession of territory by Ethiopia to Italy.

The French foreign office confirmed that the plan had been prepared for submission to Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy and Emperor Haille Selassie of Ethiopia, but refused to disclose details.

Reaction Abroad Cool.

Reaction abroad to the reported peace plan included:

London—Silence.

Geneva—League officials said they doubted any compromise was possible satisfying Il Duce, the Ethiopian Emperor and the League.

Rome—A foreign office official commented "We are not very optimistic of such plans." Diplomats said British Ambassador Sir Eric Drummond has a long and "most important" conversation with Mussolini at the Venice palace tonight. The British embassy refused to say whether it concerned the reported Franco-British peace terms or measures to ease Anglo-Italian tension.

Addis Ababa—Officials reiterated that Ethiopia will not cede Tigre Province in the north—now occupied by the Italians. The reported Franco-British plan has not reached here yet.

The British experts reportedly have returned to London with the rough draft of the plan for consideration by officials there, before it is submitted to the League, Il Duce and the Negus. French sources said Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, might present the formula officially to the League this week-end.

Based on "Minimum Demands."

The Franco-British solution is understood to be based upon Mussolini's "minimum demands" as outlined to Premier Laval. It does not go nearly as far as Il Duce insisted, however.

The French hope to arouse sufficient interest in the new scheme to cause postponement of the enforcement of economic sanctions at Geneva, thus prolonging the calm atmosphere which Laval believes conducive to successful negotiation.

British officials were said to desire secrecy in order not to give the impression of working outside the framework of the League.

Il Duce Gets Plan Today.

French newspaper versions published this afternoon agreed with the outline as given to the United Press at the foreign office. Paris Soir added that the plan would be laid before Mussolini tomorrow. This newspaper said Italy was called upon to quit the Ethiopian holy city of Aksum, while Harar and the upper plateau would remain under domination of Haile Selassie.

British Minister-Plenipotentiary Lloyd Thomas conferred with Laval, reportedly about the new formula. Diplomats said such a plan would

In Rome, a communique announced Italian native troops in the south routed an Ethiopian force. In the north a new Italian line has been established within six miles of Makale, the fall of which is expected momentarily.

Despite failure of all previous efforts, France was reported to have evolved a new peace plan for settling the Ethiopian war. The plan was said to involve concession of territory by Ethiopia to Italy.

Rome strengthened her economic defenses by ordering drastic control of the consumption of coal, meat, electricity and other necessities.

The League of Nations' boycott of Italy continued to grow with 29 nations having agreed to buy no Fascist goods.

With the Italian Somaliland Armies, via Mogadiscio, Oct. 29.—A squadron of Caproni planes bombed and set fire to the southeastern Ethiopian armed town of Magalo today.

Evading anti-aircraft fire, the planes roared back and forth across the settlement, raining destruction upon the defenders until the Ethiopians broke from cover and scattered into the hills.

Munitions depots were blasted in another raid at Cabren-Darre (not shown on standard maps).

Magalo is about 250 miles southeast of Addis Ababa and only 50 miles from Ginir, important trading post near which the Ethiopians reportedly have massed about 350,000 troops.

After bombarding the trenches around Magalo, the planes swooped low while gunners spattered machine-gun fire upon the scattering warriors.

Magalo was reported fortified heavily against land or air attack.

Peace Theme Of Roosevelt's Proclamation

His Armistice Day Message Voices Determination to Avoid Conflict.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

As the State Department maintained its policy of "watchful waiting" in the Italo-Ethiopian situation, President Roosevelt yesterday used his proclamation calling for an observance of November 11 as Armistice Day as a vehicle to reiterate this country's determination to remain at peace with all nations, as well as his conviction that permanent peace can and must be attained throughout the world.

The President, without mentioning the East African war, pointed to it as adding significance to this year's celebration of Armistice Day, when the disastrous World War came to an end.

According to Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion, President Roosevelt personally will lead the observance of Armistice Day when he makes an address at Arlington National Cemetery, the resting place of America's heroic dead. This speaking engagement has not yet been confirmed officially at the White House.

Attitude to Be Voiced.

But it is assumed the President will participate in the Armistice Day ceremonies at Arlington and that the arrangements were made when Murphy visited the White House last week. It also is believed that in view of the unsettled world situation the President will use the occasion to express this country's attitude toward the African war and League of Nations efforts to bring Benito Mussolini to his knees.

By November 11 the European situation should be fairly clear. The League financial and economic sanctions will probably have been made effective and it will be seen whether the failure of this Government so far to shut off the ship-

2 Shot; Machine Gun Routs 700; Kentucky Sends Troops to Mine

By the Associated Press.

Mannington, Ky., Oct. 29.—Two men were wounded and several others reported slightly injured in a clash here late today between a crowd of union miners and sympathizers and guards at the Williams coal mine. A troop of cavalry was ordered from Hopkinsville to prevent further disorder.

The demonstrators, estimated by Maj. Oren Coin, of the Kentucky National Guard, at 600 to 700, chiefly from adjacent Muhlenberg County, arrived at the Williams property, a large nonunion mine, about the time the 400 men at work were due to come out.

Crowding along the highways in automobiles and trucks, the demonstrators were warned by Superintendent Kenneth Snarr against coming on company property. Snarr and Special Deputy Ernest King then advanced and shouted warnings. Reports were that tear gas bombs were used in an attempt to drive back the demonstrators and that someone fired a pistol.

The mine guards opened fire with rifles, which halted them temporarily. Henry Hollis, 65, a Negro, was shot in the side and a white man, Enos Martin, 31, of Crofton, was shot in the chest. Martin was sent to a Hopkinsville hospital, where it was said his wound was not serious. Hollins was sent to a Madisonville hospital, where it was said he would recover unless complications developed.

Death Reaches For Mae Marsh

Film Actress Grows Weak, But Doctors Still Hold Out Hope.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 29.—Blonde Mae Marsh, one of the silent screen's best known actresses, was "steadily sinking" tonight at Santa Monica Hospital, where she was taken last week when her appendix burst and gangrene poisoning developed.

Although the actress was feared to be dying, her physician, Dr. Russell Sands, said he still held hope for her recovery.

Four other Hollywood film actors showed improvement from illness that sent them to hospitals.

Gordon Westcott, polo-playing featured actor who was hurt in a game last Sunday, was said to have made a slight gain, but his condition still was critical. He suffered a brain concussion.

Adolphe Menjou, best-known in pictures for his portrayals of the suave sophisticate, had rallied from a stomach ailment that caused concern to his physicians. His wife, Veree Teasdale, screen actress, was in an adjoining room, improved from an attack of colitis.

Doctors at the National Military Home Hospital, Sawtelle, said Buster Keaton, frozen-faced comedian of the screen, was making steady, if slow progress from a nervous breakdown that caused him to be taken there from his home in a strait jacket.

Two juvenile film players also were laid up—with sprained ankles. They were Freddie Bartholomew, English boy actor, and Betty Burgess, 18, singer and dancer.

The cancellation, the newspaper says, resulted from strong protests against the Nazi official's appearance by Tulsa city officials, who were urged to protest by Jewish leaders in Tulsa.

sary if housing is to be provided within the reach of low income workers. He pointed out that rents for PWA housing would be based only on operating expenses and on the 55 per cent loan for construction of the buildings. The 45 per cent grant made by the Government will not be taken into consideration in figuring returns and amortization.

Permanent Housing Set-Up.

Ickes said he believed there should be a permanent Government housing authority to have charge of housing activities and to continue the program indefinitely. He declared "slum clearance has nothing to do with relief" and added "there is hardly any reasonable limit to the amount of money that could be spent to clear out slums."

Ickes said that rentals for Government housing will be figured at 3 per cent of the 55 per cent loans, plus cost of maintenance. He added that tennants would be selected and that persons in higher income brackets would not be permitted to rent Government-built houses. He said he hoped the houses would eventually be turned over to local authorities for administration. He added that a permanent housing program could be financed through a revolving fund.

Ickes has been periodically at odds with the Federal Housing Administration, which has been insuring loans for privately built housing. He said houses so erected would not be slum-clearance projects.

"What private individuals are interested in clearing out slums?" he asked.

'36 Aspirants on Silver Tongue Standard; But Landon Copies Garbo; Peace No News.

By Raymond Clapper

AMONG prospective Presidential candidates, the only one thus far who seems really to believe that silence is golden is Gov. Landon of Kansas.

All of the others are on a silver tongue standard, even President Roosevelt. He is planning to march into Georgia to make a nationally broadcast speech right in the ears of Gov. Talmadge, his chief critic in the South, or at least the most noisy one. Herbert Hoover, after a rousing speech at Ooakland, Calif., recently, is now in a huddle with his political assistant, Ben Allen, preparatory to another speech, this time in the East, before the Ohio Society in New York. Representative Hamilton Fish not only makes as many speeches as he can, but between times has managed to get into the newspapers on Senator Borah's coattails by the simple trick of giving out a left-handed non-commital indorsement of the Senator from Idaho. Col. Frank Knox is speaking as often as his newspaper publishing duties will permit. Senator Borah is coming to Washington shortly, where the sounding board is stronger than at Boise, Idaho. All of the candidates, except Landon, are ballyhoo conscious.

Landon uses the Garbo technique—inverted publicity. Actually, there is too much newspaper and magazine publicity now to suit him and his friends. But there is nothing they can do about it. Some time back, before the snowballing of his candidacy began, Gov. Landon, in a weak moment, yielded to the pleading of some old friends in Ohio, his birthplace, and consented to address a chamber of commerce dinner at Cleveland next week. He has been working on the speech, which wil lbe devoted to a recital of Kansas affairs. That is, if a cold which he is reported to have, does not prevent him from making the trip. This is the only invitation outside of Kansas that has been accepted, although dozens have poured in on him.

An unfortunate illnes sof Mrs. Landon, an operation for appendicitis, prevented the Governor a few months ago from accepting an invitation from Herbert Hoover to make a pilgrimage to Palo Alto, Knox, Gov. Nice of Maryland, and others have been there. Landon knows Hoover. The former President stopped off at Topeka and was entertained in the Landon home. But that was some time ago. Some of the Landon friends have been fearful that the former President would stop off again. The Governor, of course, always receives distinguished visitors who go to Topeka. But, if some of his friends should hear that Mr. Hoover was bound for Topeka they undoubtedly would attempt to kidnap the Governor and shanghai him out of town.

In the wheat belt, the 5 per cent wheat acreage reduction decreased by AAA is regarded as a technicality serving merely to provide a pretext for continuing the benefit payments. Agriculturists, both the experts and the practical farmer, agree that a 5 per cent reduction in wheat is a purely theoretical objective and can be only such. Weather conditions, and other factors, cause such varying yield that, to cut acreage 5 per cent means nothing in the way of anticipating the amount of wheat produced. Production will vary much more than the margin indicated by 5 per cent of acreage.

In other words, AAA would come to about the same result by simply telling farmers to plant their normal acreage. But it looks better, when sending out the benefit checks, to have the appearance of a curtailment program still on paper.

Nothing is heard about it publicly, but undercover talk is heard of former Gov. Lowden of Illinois as a Republican presidential possibility. He was the only speaker at the Republican grass roots conference in Springfield, Ill., last summer who seemed to have any idea of what the farm problem was all about. What little constructive thought was offered there came from Lowden.

If you could turn back the clock ten years Lowden would be the obvious candidate. He's a little old for the backbreaking job of a Presidential fight now. Even so, some are talking about the possibility of a front porch campaign from his Sinissippi farm, near Oregon, Ill. This talk might be regarded as designed to bump off Col. Frank Knox in Illinois, except for the fact that it is heard among some of Knox's friends in other States. Mostly, the Lowden talk is like the Borah talk—the result of wishful thinking. Lowden likely would have been President in 1921 had not one of his misguided friends, without his knowledge, bought two delegates cheap in Missouri. That ruined him, demonstrating again that, in politics, a good man can take care of his enemies, and that it is his friends who get him into trouble.

You probably missed it completely because peace isn't as good news apparently as war, but the peace treaty has just been signed ending a three-year bloody jungle war between Paraguay and Bolivia over the Chaco.

It was a real war, but it suffered for lack of press agenting. The ratio of casualties far higher than in the World War. It is estimated that 100,000 were killed. According to one estimate, Bolivia lost 30,000 prisoners. The United States and the League of Nations were involved in efforts to prevent the war and later to stop it.

And, when it is all over, and the miserable inhabitants of both countries are released from the horrible jungle struggle, the news gets five lines in a newspaper, or nothing at all. Good news is no news.

Jobmaster General Farley has been the victim of a peculiarly annoying place-seeker recently. Unable to gain admittance to Farley's office, the presumably deserving Democrat has been leaving notes in Farley's automobile. Farley read them for a few days, but now he just throws them out the window.

A friend, getting into Farley's car, noticed that the Postmaster General picked up a neatly folded piece of paper and threw it out without reading it, and was curious.

Farley then related the story to him.

"It doesn't bother me at all," Farley explained, "except that I'm afraid I'll wake up some morning and find the fellow in bed with me."

Ballou Defends D. C.'s Teaching Of Communism

Instruction Is Necessary to Offset Propaganda, School Head Says.

to call upon Comptroller General John R. McCarl to interpret the anti-communism amendment to the current District appropriation bill so that the mere mention of communism by a teacher in a classroom will hold up that teacher's salary.

Through a special committee, Gen. Fries was authorized to act in applying for an injunction until the next Congress convenes.

My dear Mr. Fetty:

On October 24, 1935, you submitted a series of 12 questions concerning the teaching of communism in the public schools of the District of Columbia. I submit below the questions which you asked me and my answer to each question:

1. Do you think Communism should be taught in the D. C. schools?

Answer: Facts about Communism have been taught in the District of Columbia schools for some time. The legal opinion of Corporation Counsel Prettyan does not, in the judgment of the school authorities, require any change in the instruction heretofore offered. Contrary to the introductory statement in your letter, the school board is not instituting the teaching of Communism in the schools at this time. The instruction which has heretofore been offered concerning Communism, Fascism and other forms of political government in Europe have heretofore aroused no adverse comment. I am of the opinion that that type of instruction is desirable. I am unalterably opposed to the instruction in Communism which aims at indoctrination of pupils in favor of Communism.

2. Do you intend to teach theory alone?

Answer: The course of study calls for a discussion of the elementary facts regarding Communism as a form of government. The instruction aims to be factual nad not theoretical.

3. Will students be compelled to read reference books on Communism?

4. Will they be disciplined if they refuse to study it?

Answer—Pupils are expected to receive instruction in communism as taught in the public schools to the extent that it is a part of a prescribed course of study. That instruction has been offered for a number of years without arousing any adverse comment from parents. The supplementary reading on communism is intended to give the pupils information about communism. The books used not only give the facts about communism, but also show that communism is antagonistic to the fundamental principles of American democracy. I believe all students should be familiar with such facts.

5. Will teachers be required to state to the class that this form of government, communism, is dangerous to our national safety, and is to be shunned?

Answer—The teaching of the facts about communism as provided in our course of study will clearly indicate that the fundamental ideals of communism are antagonistic to the fundamental ideals of American democracy.

6. Will they be told of the misery in Russia as a result of communism?

Answer: Undoubtedly if pupils read the textbooks and the reference books used in the instruction in communism they will become familiar with conditions that exist in communistic countries. If for any reason, publis do not read such assignments their knowledge of the conditions as they exist will be to that extent incomplete.

7. What good do you expect the children to get out of this teaching?

Answer: The teaching of communism as a plan of political organization will give the public school pupils in Washington an understanding of a subject that they will read about in the press and hear discussed by platform speakers. Knowledge of communism, as pointed out in the Prettyman opinion, is believed to be a better safeguard against propaganda in its favor than is ignorance of it.

No person can fully appreciate the advantages of our form of government or understand the political, social, economic, and the religious and spiritual life of foreign countries without knowing something of European life and European conditions including communism, fascism and other forms of government in Europe.

8. Do you believe that the good derived from this factual knowledge will over balance the general bad moral effect that this decision will have over the country generally?

Answer: I believe that the effect of such factual instruction about communism will far exceed any possible adverse results from such instruction.

9. Do you believe that there is less danger in communism than racial trouble?

Answer: I believe that the most serious danger to the progress of civilization, including the maintenance of American ideals of democracy, lies in the insidious propaganda which is being systematically carried on throughout the world today. Much of that propaganda is deliberately aimed at the young people in European countries as well as in this country. If we are successfully to combat such propaganda we must reach those same young people with factual information concerning political, economic, social, and spiritual matters before our young people become indoctrinated with such propaganda. Obviously this must be done as early in the school program as possible in order that our young people may have sufficient knowledge and understanding to meet the appeals of such propaganda. I know of no racial troubles either current or anticipated which are as dangerous to American institutions as the insidious propaganda regarding communism.

10. Do you believe there is a flag in every school room in the District of Columbia, and that they are saluted each morning?

Answer: It is the purpose to have an American flag in every schoolroom in the District of Columbia. It is quite possible that there may be among the 2,000 classrooms in the District of Columbia some rooms without an American flag. They are supplied as promptly as requisitions are made for them by principals of buildings and our appropriations will permit.

In the elemenary schools, as a part of the opening exercises, children salute the American flag. The flag is not saluted in individual classrooms of junior and senior high schools, but is saluted at the regular assemblies held each week in those schools.

11. Is your knowledge and belief about the good to be obtained by teaching communism arrived at in the same manner as your knowledge and belief concerning the flags in each room?

Answer: I do not know what this question means.

12. Do you personally believe that anyone who teaches communism, either in schools or out, is a 100 per cent American and patriot?

Answer. I think a well qualified teacher can teach communism and be a patriatic American, in the same manner that one can teach the facts about a monarchical form of government and be a patriotic citizen of this country, or teach the fundamental political theory of one of the great political parties in the United States without belonging to that political party.

Sadist Reappears, Whipping 2 Women

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Attacks on three women spurred police today in their search for a maniacal sadist, believed to be the "whipper" who terrorized women in the West Side several weeks ago.

While police were seeking the man who bound and beat Miss Anne Wilhelm, 21, and her cousin, Miss Mary Wilhelm, 20, Msr. Pauline Litt, 30, was slugged today in her home on the Northwest Side by a man wielding a hammer.

The Wilhelm girls were beaten last night in their hotel room on the near north side. After tying both up, the assailant whipped them with his belt and attacked Miss Anne Wilhelm after threatening to burn her feet with a cigarette when she tied to fight off his advances.

He entered their room by menacing Miss Mary Wilhelm with a pistol as she stood outside the door, forcing her to have her roommate open it, she told detectives.

Peace Theme Of Roosevelt's Proclamation

ment of raw materials to Italy and Ethiopia seriously interferes with this concerted action to bring peace.

By that time also it should be clear whether American enterprises have taken on or are seeking additional business in Italy. The extent that such business has developed in October, since the President's neutrality proclamation and his warning that transactions of "any character" with Italy or Ethiopia must be carried on at the risk of the Americans engaging in them, is not yet known here, although early in November tentative figures will be computed.

Chance to Clarify Stand.

At all events, Armistice Day will afford President Roosevelt an opportunity to enunciat more clearly the American policy, to take any further steps he thinks are necessary and to elaborate on the contention in his proclamation yesterday that "it is particularly fitting on this anniversary of the Armistice that we should express our determination to remain at peace with all natoins and our conviction that permanent peace can and must be attained throughout the world."

The President, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Undersecretary William Phillips held a lengthy and secret conference at the White House late yesterday. The two State Department officials were not listed among the day's callers. They entered the White House by a side door and after remaining more than an hour wit hthe President left by the same way.

U. S. Steel Loss Cut 7 Millions In 9 Months

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—The $2,000,000,000 United States Steel Corporation reported today that it had slashed its defict for the first nine months of 1935 to $4,241,499 from $11,466,491 in the corresponding period of las year.

Directors of the corporation declared a dividend of 50 cents on the preferred stock thus maintaining the level of payment which has prevailed since January, 1933, when the annual rate was cut from $7. The dividend was in line with Wall Street's expectations.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the corporation, in a statement following the meeting of the board said:

"At the present time operations are averaging about 42 per cent of capacity. It is believed this average will be maintained substantially throughout the fourth quarter."

Near Profit Level.

The area between 40 and 45 per cent of capacity has generally been regarded in financial circles as the theoretical level below which operations are at a loss, and in which a net profit is possible.

Discussing the corporation's operations, Taylor said:

"The operations for the third quarter of 1935 averaged 37.7 per cent of capacity of finished products for sale, compared with 24 per cent in the corresponding quarter of 1934.

"The tonnage shipped in the third quarter of 1935 exceeded the second quarters tonnage by 18,473 tons. However, in the classes of products shipped a relatively large proportion of the third quarter's shipments were of the lesser priced products than was the case in the second quarter. This is reflected in the eranings, which show a total of $648,294 less than earnings for the second quarter.

"Prices received during the third quarter averaged very close to those obtained in the preceding quarter."

Total earnings of the corporation for the September quarter after ordinary operating expenses totaled $13,469,570 compared with $14,117,864 for the June quarter and $3,768,863 for the third quarter of 1934.

After interest, depreciation, depletion, overhead expense on iron ore, etc., the corporation had a deficit of $1,305,205 compared with a deficit of $762,493 in the previous three months and a deficit of $9,826,767 in the third quarter of 1934.

teries but it was ineffective, the Italian airmen reported.

Rome, Oct. 29 (U.P.).—The war office today announced that Italian native dubats, advincing on the Somaliland front, routed an Ethiopian force between Scillave and Gorahai after brisk fighting. The Dubats captured 732 rifles. The war office did not estimate casualties.

Reports from the northern front said Italy's latest advances had placed "our soldiers in control of the teritrory up to the edge of the Takkaze an dits tributary, the Mai Weri. This represents a strip between 40 and 50 miles wide south of the Aksum-Adigrat line."

Heavy defenses have been thrown around both flanks of the advancing main army. The supporting forces reportedly are occupying the towns of Addi Rassi and Debra (Mount) Gannat.

The northern caravan center of Mikale is now within range of Italy's advance field artillery pieces, which are being drawn rapidly into position on the Faras Mal plain.

Ethiopians from Mikale informed Italian commanders that only a small contingent of Ras Seyoum's army is concentrated in the hills overlooking the town, and that Seyoum has ordered his men to resist only slightly and then retreat.

A new Italian line in the plains of Faras Mai was established last Saturday. It is about 16 miles farther advanced than the old line, which was south of Aduwa, and is only 6 miles from Makale, capture of which is expected momentarily.

Gen. Emilio de Bono, commander of the northern army, telegraphed Rome today that the first army corps had completed a successful scouting expedition around the town of Hausien, which is in the center of the Haramat Region. Makale is on the outskirts of Haramat.

"Several notables from this region, which we have not yet occupied, have presented themselves to the command at Aduwa, submitting voluntarily," Gen. De Mono said.

Liquor Sleuths Adopt Mechanical Sniffers

Investigators for the Federal Alcohol Tax Unit will find it comparatively easy to locate illicit liquor stills from now on.

Their automobiles are to be equipped with mechanical bloodhounds; a device recently perfected to determine the bacteria content of air.

It works this way: If mash is being fermented bacteria fills the air. The presence of such bacteria will show up on a sensatized plate operated by the agent.

So if you intend to manufacture illegal whisky keep your bacteria in check.

stention from strong drink, tobacco or profanity. He spent only what was necessary to keep him out of prison and was reputed to have more than $60,000 cached somewhere in Chicago. Police were mystified by the lengths he went to perfect his crimes.

After the 1924 robbery of the Inland Trust & Savings Bank, for which he was sentenced to Joliet for ten years to life, Fernekes was captured in a public library, poring over books on chemistry which dealt with poison gas and high explosives. He had worked as an electrician to learn the technique of electric drilling and welding, useful in opening safes.

In county pail, awaiting prison, authorities foiled his plot to blow himself out with explosives.

His first sentence to Pontiac Reformatory in 1915 was for robbing an office in the First National Bank Building. Three years later he led the $105,000 robbery of the Argo State Bank. Fernekes fled with the wife of one of his pals to Pearl River, N. Y., where he operated an electrician's shop and in 1921 raided the First National Bank.

He killed two men in escaping and returned to Chicago where he lay low until the Inland robbery. That ended his career as a bank bandit.

Harry Thaw Sued for $10,000 In Clash With D. C. Headwaiter

Harry K. Thaw, well-known Winchester, Va., "fire laddie," was named defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Paul Jaeck, headwaiter at the Shoreham Hotel, who claimed he had been maltreated when he was forced, in the line of duty, to evict Thaw from the hotel January 3.

The suit, filed by John J. Sirica as counsel, alleged Thaw had beaten Janeck on the head, face, arms and body when the headwaiter remonstrated with him because of alleged boisterous conduct.

Thaw was served with the papers yesterday when he visited the Raleigh Hotel in one of his periodic excursions to the city. So far as is known Thaw refrained from any manifestations of displeasure when the deputy marshals slipped the summons under him arm.

Accounts of Thaw's affair at the Shoreham claimed he had first sought to "solo" dance, and then, in an outburst of exuberance, had attempted to dance with most of the hotel's patrons in the ballroom.

Thaw first attracted publicity many years ago when he was held for the slaying of Stanford White, nationally known architect, whom he accused of trifling with the affections of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, wife of the alleged slayer. For years Thaw was confined to an asylum. He gained official freedom in another jurisdiction after he had eluded guards and fled from Mattewan, N. Y.

On The Air Today

A NOVEL 15-minute program has been arranged for tonight by the District of Columbia Medical Society, principally to direct attention to the series of weekly morning talks under sponsorship of the society from WMAL. Tonight's program is titled "Highlights from the Broadcasts of the Past Year" and will be staged before an audience of society members, direct from their auditorium at 1718 M street northwest.

A number of voices will be heard, including those of a child, Jerry, who has recovered from an attack of infantile paralysis; Marian, a deaf girl who is partially regaining her hearing, and Walter Gustafson, now cured of tuberculosis. The "Family Doctor," of course, will conduct the proceedings, for it is his voice that is heard in the weekly morning programs.

It is hoped that this special night program will draw added attention to the daytime quarter hours—and will incidentally inform many doctors of the Society's radio activities—doctors who otherwise cannot hear the program. The station, WMAL. The Time, 10 p. m.

Don't forget that "Velvet Voices" makes its second appearance at WRC tonight at 7:45. I heard this group in its initial audition and it was a piece of excellent mixed voice work they turned in then. I understand the group is even better today. They do arrangements in the Waring fashion. Tonight: "Chasing Shadows," "Son Of a Half Back," "Black Eyed Susan Brown," "Among My Souvenirs," and "I Wished On the Moon."

This letter from the Christ Child Convalescent Home near Rockville: "The children of the Christ Child Farm are delighted with their radio, which you and Mr. George Wasserman, so kindly gave them. Although they have so much to interest them and give them pleasure, they sorely missed their friends of Radioland. I wish to join the children and heartily thank you for your extreme kindness." Signed Margaret G. Haislup, superintendent. All of which means that through the generosity of "Uncle George" Wasserman, a receiving set was given to the Christ Child Farm. If you know of a worthy institution or home for children or hospital or some such institution in which a set also could be well placed, address your suggestions to Radio Editor, The Post.

How to Alkalize Your Stomach Almost Instantly
Amazingly Fast Relief Now from "Acid Indigestion" Over-Indulgence, Nausea and Upsets

SIGNS WHICH OFTEN INDICATE "ACID STOMACH"
Pain after eating — Frequent Headaches
Indigestion — Feeling of Weakness
Nausea — Sleeplessness
Loss of Appetite — Mouth Acidity
Auto-Intoxication — Sour Stomach
If you want really quick relief from an upset or painful stomach condition — arising from acidity following over-eating, smoking, mixtures of foods or stimulants — just try this:
Take—2 teaspoonfuls of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia in a full glass of water. OR—2 Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets, the exact equivalent.
This acts to almost immediately alkalize the whole stomach content. Neutralizes the acids that cause headaches, nausea, and indigestion pains. You feel results at once.
Try it. AND — if you are a frequent sufferer from "acid stomach," use Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after meals. You'll forget you have a stomach!
When you buy, see that any box or bottle you accept is clearly marked "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."
Also in Tablet Form: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

FURTHER evidence that Section 213 (marriage clause of the economy act) is working an inequitable hardship on the low-salaried employes is mounting high in our mail. We haven't heard of any dismissals of one of a married couple whose combined salaries amounted to more than $5,000, but cases of which the following letter is typical have come to our attention by the hundreds:

BAKER.

"In reference to Section 213, I would like to call your attention to this fact: The small-salaried clerks with families to support are the ones who are suffering while the high salaried are living on easy street.

"I have recently been reinstated in the Government service on an indefinite roll. My husband, an ex-service man, has just passed an examination and has been twice called for appointment, but was turned down because I am in the service. I would have given up my job in favor of him, but he was to start at a salary even lower than mine, which is $1,440.

"We could not possibly live on it for we have two minor children to support. As it is we are hardly getting along on my salary and if we were both working, our combined salaries would be barely more than a living wage.

"There are couples in the service who were both working when they married and because of that Section 213 does not bother them. Do you think it fair that because a man is trying to get into the service after he is married and his wife working there, he be turned down?

"It is no wonder that this law has caused divorces, and I, for one, think it should be amended.

"MRS. H. S. (F)."

Miss Mattie Richards Tyler (P), Treasury, will be hostess to the Washington Alumnae of Beta Sigma Omicron National Sorority tonight.

Treasury Dance Near.

The Welfare Association at Procurement Division, Treasury, is completing plans for a gala benefit dance and entertainment to be held at the Shoreham Hotel Saturday night. Morris Weingarten (C), is chairman of arrangements, assisted by:

Bill McVicker, assistant chairman; Miss Sylvia Gladstone, entertainment; Miss Anne Rossner (F), public relations; Charles Hughitt, Mrs. Loretta Osborn and Mrs. L. H. De La Rue, tickets, and Mrs. Fannye Sweeney, hostess.

Earle P. Messinger, formerly of Procurement Division, Treasury, is reported to have been transferred to Veterans' Administration.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF F, P or C follows your name in this column, call in person on the Federal Diary editor today only between 3:30 and 5 p. m. You will receive tickets to one of the following Loew's Theaters: F, Loew's Fox (stage, York and King and other acts; screen, Joan Crawford and Brian Aherne in "I Live My Life"); P, Loew's Palace (George Burns and Gracie Allen in "The Big Broadcast of 1936," and added attraction, "Wings Over Ethiopia"); or C, Loew's Columbia (Warner Oland in "Charlie Chan in Shanghai").

Roger W. Harrison (F), Andrew W. Anderson, and S. R. Pottinger, technologists of the Bureau of Fisheries, are the authors of a report on "Effect of Manufacture on the Quality of Nonoily Fish Meals," just published by Commerce.

Virginian Appointed.

Charles O. Handley, formerly connected with the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries at Richmond, has been appointed associate conservationist in the Biological Survey and has established headquarters at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, where he will serve as leader of the research, demonstration and educational program being launched in co-operation with the institute, the Virginia Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries and the American Wildlife Institute.

Youth Administration.

Q. What is the National Youth Administration and where can I get detailed information regarding it?—F. L. A. (P).

A. The National Youth Administration was established within the Works Progress Administration by executive order of June 26, 1935. It is the function of this agency to initiate and administer a program primarily for youths in relief families, which endeavors (1) to find employment in private industry for youths between the ages of 16 and 25; (2) to provide employment for such youths at work-relief projects suited to their abilities and needs; (3) to provide vocational guidance and training or retraining for youths without specific skill; (4) to extend part-time employment to needy college students and college graduates and small cash assistance (about $6 a month) to needy high-school students unable to continue their education without aid.

CCC Administration.

Q. In what department does the CCC work fall?—A. P. H. (F).

A. The CCC is not administered by any of the ten executive departments, but by an agency known as the Emergency Conservation Work, created by executive order of April 5, 1933, under an act of March 31, 1933. Robert Fechner is the present director.

Mrs. Sarah Van Hyning (Fashion Authority for Flint and Kent, Buffalo): "I'm not a reporter, Mr. Rosenberger, but I do want to find out what next year's smart looking cars will look like. Can you give me any help?"

William J. Rosenberger (Automobile Editor, Buffalo Times): "Sure, get somebody to show you the new Dodge. In the past five years I've written literally columns about Dodge ruggedness and dependability . . . and last year Dodge owners were all raving about the amazing economy of the 1935 job. But the 1936 Dodge is the—well, it's far and away the smartest, best looking car Dodge ever made, in my opinion. Go see it—any woman will be fascinated with it."

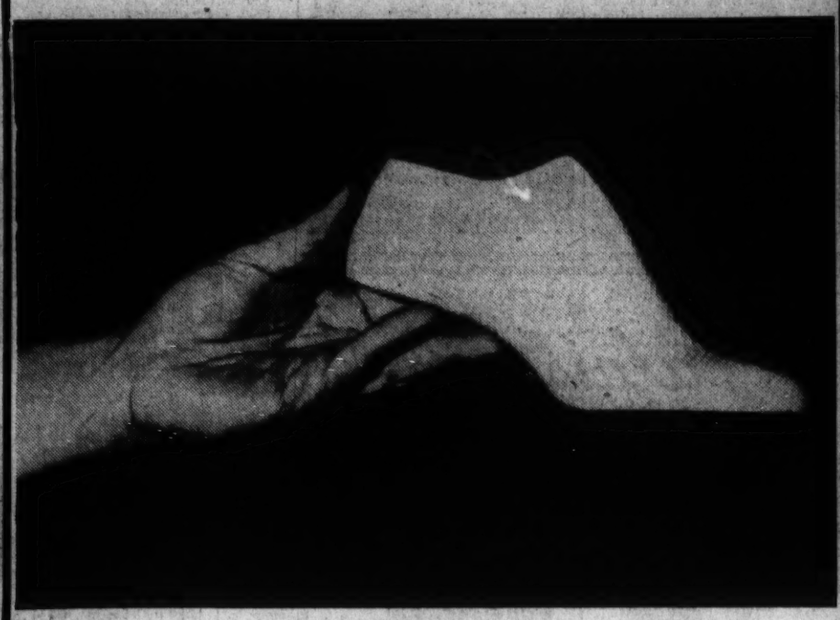
There is a Likeness of your foot in Wood



NO MATTER what sort of foot you have, be it narrow heel, high instep, wide heel, long toe—regardless of what combination of toe, heel and arch, there is a likeness of your foot in wood. It is the last over which the proper shoe for your foot is made.

And what a responsibility this wooden foot carries. It is the foundation of your foot comfort.

Years ago, lasts were chiseled out of stone—merely the general shape of a human foot and one last for both left and rights. Then came the days of hand-carved lasts. Even then it was a makeshift affair. When stout sizes were called for, small leather pads were fitted over normal lasts and shoes made accordingly.

Today all that is changed. Special lasts are built for every conceivable foot construction ranging from quadruple A to double E, the narrowest to the widest, and in every size. Although intricate machines stamp out lasts in large quantities in this modern age, the model for each one has been painstakingly carved by hand—the expert hand of a craftsman whose years at his bench have developed his expertness. And from his model are made the copies of your wooden foot. And over this wooden foot is molded the leather to make your shoes.

Thus it is that the makers of Matrix (the shoe that is truly "your footprint in leather"), and Collegebred, with their myriad number of lasts, are able to meet the requirements of the active woman whose equally active feet demand a shoe molded to her particular foot construction, yet whose appearance calls for good looking shoes as well. A glance inside a Matrix shoe reveals the molded sole to fit the natural curve and bone construction of your foot.

Woodward & Lothrop and Matrix have joined to furnish Washington women such shoe satisfaction. For Woodward & Lothrop are the exclusive carriers of Matrix shoes in Washington. And it is a most natural part of the Woodward & Lothrop policy that no customer shall be misfitted. Accuracy in fitting is a self-imposed and rigid rite. Here it is that in our extensive stocks of Matrix shoes we carry as many as fourteen lasts to the size. And once your foot is fitted it can never be misfitted at Woodward & Lothrop, for your particular last is indelibly registered right in your shoe.

Bullets Are Fired At Candidate's Car

Widespread Search Made for Two Men.

By the Associated Press.

Galax, Va., Oct. 29.—A widespread search was conducted by officers today for two men who fired bullets into a moving automobile last night in an apparent attempt to assassinate Paul Dalton, Democratic candidate for treasurer of Carroll County.

Early today officers chased a sedan from the scene of the wreck of Dalton's car, but lost trace of it.

After Dalton had fallen to the floor of his car to escape bullets, and allowed the machine to run off the road, he walked back to Woodlawn.

Sarah Ashton Is Wed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shepherdstown, W. Va., Oct. 29. Miss Sarah Ashton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan Ashton, of Martinsburg, and Mr. Forrest Twigg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Twigg, of Kearneysville, were married Sunday at the Presbyterian Manse, Shepherdstown. The Rev. John McLaughlin, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, officiated. Immediate relatives and a few friends of the couple witnessed the ceremony.

W. F. W. Post Elects.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 29.—Dr. W. B. O'Rear was elected commander of the Waynesboro Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, here yesterday. Allen V. Smith was named senior vice commander, and Jacob Mentzer junior vice commander. Others elected are: Quartermaster, Raymond Reeves; post judge advocate, Paul C. Moomaw; chaplain, Robert J. Haley; officer of the day, Clark W. Mentzer; trustees, J. W. Hawley and Robert J. Clark.

Divorce Is Granted.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 29.—Judge Don P. Halsey has granted divorce in the Circuit Court to Grace T. Smith from Paulette Smith. The suit was based on a charge of desertion.

5 P.M. is a test of how you FEEL

"How do I feel.... Swell!—why do you ask?"

IT is all so simple, too! That tired, run-down, exhausted feeling quite often is due to lack of a sufficiency of those precious red-blood-cells. Just build up these oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life... food is really turned into energy and strength ...you can't help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores deficient red-blood-cells...it also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the nation's standby for over 100 years... and unless your case is exceptional it should help you, too. © S.S.S. Co.

Insist on S.S.S. Tonic in the blood-red cellophane-wrapped package. The big 20-oz. size is sufficient for two weeks' treatment... it's more economical.

A Columnist's Day—and Night.

New York, Oct. 29.

2 P. M.: Grouchily awakened by the racket raised on Madison avenue by the street-tearer-uppers. A machine resembling a pneumatic riveter is tearing up huge chunks of tarred pavement, and the noise is unrelenting. Probably the man operating it would be thoroughly disgusted with a person who awakens at 2 in the afternoon. The morning mail is interesting. The first is a comment from Isidor Mandel, 71 East 97th street, on the recent column about handicapped people who made good. He points out ironically that the Municipal Civil Service of New York would bar Franklin D. Roosevelt from a job because of his paralysis. Mandel, minus one hand, was turned down by the Municipal Civil Service. "It seems that Mr. Finnegan, president of the Civil Service, has not heard of the old Irish saying, which you quoted: 'God handicaps children in order to distinguish them later,'" he concludes, not without just cause for bitterness. In the same stack of mail, a letter from Abe Ostrow, 243 Troy avenue, Brooklyn, pointing out that the WPA maintains a recreation center at 107 Washington street, near Rector street, downtown, for the adult physically handicapped, with free instruction in crafts. Your grouchiness disappears as you read letters like these.

4 P. M.: In two hours, matching the tempo of the automatic machine that is ripping up Madison avenue, you have completed a magazine story, a radio broadcast script, and now you are writing your column. Foreman Lawler, of the composing room, would be happy to get the column early—just once. The phone rings, Joan Crawford and Franchot want you to join them for dinner at "21." Now the phone starts buzzing in earnest. Al H. Woods, elated beyond all measure, says that last week's receipts were $1,500 above the week prevous at "Night of January 16th," and expresses his appreciation. Ted Saucier calls from the Waldorf to verify a reservation for Al Donahue's premiere in the Sert Room. Most people call it the "Surf" room. It was named after Joseph Sert, who designed the murals. Pittsburgh calls to offer a week in vaudeville. Sid Solomon calls from Medical Center. He has just talked shore-to-ship to Jimmy Walker and relays Jimmy's greetings. Cobina Wright phones to ask advice on a preferred night club job. The Westchester County park police want to know if you'll serve as Master of Ceremonies at their annual benefit for the dependents of dead comrades.

7 P. M.: Jack, of Jack and Charlie's, really has gone to town in the preparations for the dinner which the Tones and the Sullivans are eating. The girls are giving out shrill cries of dismay as one dish after another breaks down their resistance. "We're supposed to leave tomorrow," confides Joan, "but we're taking empty suitcases to the train, riding as far as Harmon and then getting off." Tone is telling how he rejected the part in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," one of his finest characterizations, and then, because he was compelled to go through with it, played it insolently to get even. The insolence "made" the part. Jack confides that his greatest pleasure is to go down in the cellar of the swank restaurant and sing in quartets with Bob Benchley, his brother, Mack and Charlie MacArthur. Joan relates her tragic experience in visiting the "Jumbo" zoo with MacArthur. She had on a long, sweeping dress, and when she left the stables, she was more fragrant than any stablehand. Joan Bennett, Gene Markey, Dorothy Mackail, Nate Spingold and Everett Jacobs swap goodbys as we leave. "You'll come back later and sing with me," pleads the mustached Jack. "I'll meet you in the cellar." I promise, for there is no love so profound as that of one near-drunk for another.

9 p. m.: At the Level Club, on West Seventy-third street, for the annual benefit of the Nordac Club, Dave Vine, Bobe Hope, Marilyn Miller, Stoopnagle and Budd, Cora (Truckin') La Redd, the Cotton Club show, Eddie Garr, Eddie Lowry, Cross and Dunn—hundreds of acts crowded in the wings, waiting to go on. Lanky Abe Lyman confesses that the romance with Eleanor Powell has ended: "I would have told you," he mumbles, embarrassed, "but you predicted it and I was afraid you'd say 'I told you so.'" So he gave it to another writer, but failed to explain to the other writer that the real crackup of the romance traced to a phone call from an M.-G.-M. official—who told Eleanor to break off with Lyman or else forfeit her screen career. This is the same stale old Romeo who barred Agent Charlie Feldman from the Metro lot, because he married Jeanne Howard.

12 midnight: The Spanish Prince, Don Juan, and his dark-haired wife are enjoying N. T. G.'s Paradise show. Elsie Rossi, Florine Callahan, Early Dawn and other breathtakers parade in lingerie. "We had nothing like this in Madrid," says the prince, and there is a note of wistfulness in his voice.

3 a. m.: Business all over town is brisk. The Central Park Casino, El Morocco, French Casino, Jimmy Kelly's, all are jammed. Kelly's place is jammed to the doors. His 12 fan dancers can't even sit down when they come off the floor, it's so packed. At Dave's a Hollywood chorine says: "You know, those dressing rooms are real fire traps. The doors open in. If there was a fire, God help us." I make a note to call it to Joe Moss' attention. You turn your car homeward. At 5 a. m. you are still reading the morning papers and regreting that Ken Strong missed the try for point after touchdown. And so to bed.

Wotan And The Mark.

It is interesting, not to say reassuring, news that Adolf Hitler has officially repudiated the growing cult of neo-paganism in Germany. But it is still more interesting to note that he did so, according to the words of the official announcement, "at the wish of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht" who is president of the Reichsbank and economics minister. For thereby hangs the lesson that no country is sufficient unto itself—a fact fairly generally recognized in matters of economics but not yet so clearly understood in respect to morals.

Dr. Schacht, it is only fair to assume, must have been largely motivated in his recommendation by a concern for the strangling economy of his country. The connection between Reich treasury statements and Reich druid dances is not so remote as might at first appear. Dances and all the other rites of the Wagnerian Guards, as the neo-pagans were officially known, have come to represent in the mind of the world the psycopathic hysteria which dominates Germany today. Consciously or otherwise, there has developed a disinclination on the part of civilized people everywhere to enter upon dealings with a people seriously interested in the worship of Wotan.

Further, a nation intent on persecuting certain elements of its population does little to improve its national wealth. And such persecutions have provided merely one of several manifestations of Germany's tragic reversion to barbarity. Moreover, knowledge of these pogroms provoked retaliatory boycotts of varying intensity among people abroad sympathetic with the plight of their victims. The extent to which this world indignation runs is clearly seen in the rising cry against participating in the Olympics in Berlin next year. And it may well be that this protest hastened Der Fuehrer's current repudiation by not a little.

In brief, the entire about-face is a convincing demonstration of the power public opinion can exert in keeping any section of humanity from utterly shattering the hard-won standards of civilization.

The Forgotten Investor.

The president of the Investment Bankers Association, Mr. Ralph T. Crane, evidently thinks that the individual investor is the forgotten man of the New Deal.

The emphasis placed upon the necessity of creating a demand for new capital has caused people to forget the importance of creating a demand for new capital issues among individual investors. So far, the abundance of funds available for investment in Government securities and in refunding issues at low rates of interest have obscured the importance of individual buyers of new issues. The banks are bursting with funds seeking employment while investment openings have been restricted by the low state of business activity and lack of confidence.

Mr. Crane notes that with continued business recovery, industry will doubtless be in the market for new loans on a large scale. When that time comes, borrowing industries will turn to individual investors to place securities that banks and financial institutions cannot absorb. The investor must, however, be offered a rate of return that is commensurate with the risk involved in his ventures.

That is a very elementary but apparently forgotten fact that Mr. Crane does well to bring to the attention of those obsessed by the belief that low interest rates are essential to stimulate revival in the capital markets.

Irresponsible?

From all reports, there was nothing new to students at the University of Maryland in their weekly newspaper's account of the extent to which professional gambling has developed within the shadow of the university's gates. Evidently it has been an open secret that almost any one could bet on a horse, roll dice or turn a card in the cellar of a certain College Park business establishment. Apparently, the information is news only to those officials whose responsibility it is to keep informed on just such matters.

That authorities in and around College Park should not have known of the den seems unbelievable. As its name implies, College Park is largely a main road adjunct of the university. Yet if the facts have been known it is strange that neither the county police nor the administrative heads of the university have been prompted to action. For it is, as the enterprising young editor of "The Diamondback" protests, "disgusting" that such demoralizing conditions should be tolerated in conjunction with a publicly endowed institution.

The chief of the county police has been quick to dismiss the outburst as "merely a statement of those irresponsible kids at the university." Thus far, however, nothing has been said publicly by Acting President Byrd of the university. The responsible head of the institution will, of course, recognize that there is nothing irresponsible about a student effort to clean up organized gambling just off the campus of the University of Maryland.

Shaping The Budget.

Attempts of Secretary Morgenthau and Undersecretary Tugwell to minimize the effects of the Administration's spending policies just as the White House budget conferences got under way were not a happy coincidence. There are indications that extravagant spending may be curbed, to some extent, next year. But the taxpaying public would breathe easier if the Administration were less inclined to rosy predictions and more candid in facing the grave problems resulting from protracted failure to live within its income.

Mr. Tugwell's assurance that the budget can be balanced by 1938 was doubtless given in all seriousness, but its similarity to the unfulfilled promises that have been heard ever since 1931 gives the prediction a sarcastic twist. It is always easy to balance a budget on paper two years in advance. But the public learned long ago that there is no relationship between such wishful compilations and actual performance.

With Mr. Tugwell's remarkable facility in effacing items from the debit side of our national ledger, an adjustment of expenditure to revenue would seem entirely possible during the forthcoming fiscal year. In his own mind the Undersecretary of Agriculture, who moves in bucolic and financial fields with equal ease, has reduced a gross deficit of $11,600,000,000 to a mere $3,000,000,000. All that was necessary to perform this remarkable feat was to deduct from the deficit large sums optimistically labeled "recoverable," and then further subtract theoretical profits from devaluation of the currency and so-called stabilization operations.

Beside these gyrations of imaginative finance, Secretary Morgenthau's budgetary estimates are extremely conservative. Even so, it appears that he is taking advantage of WPA failure to put 3,500,000 men on the Government's relief-job pay rolls by November 1 in order to minimize the probable outlay for the entire fiscal year. Such unwillingness to face reality, on the one hand, and such optimistic guessing, on the other, are important factors in the spendthrift policy that has evolved from President Roosevelt's promise to reduce Government expenditures by 25 per cent.

The Government can always find need for expenditures far in excess of its revenue. If bankruptcy is to be avoided, however, the spending pattern must be cut from the available cloth. Budget Director Bell suggests that trimming will have to be confined to emergency activities. Because of the recent huge increases in the War and Navy Department budgets savings can scarcely be expected in the total amount appropriated for the regular departments. It is short-sighted to assume, however, that the increased outlays for military purposes must continue indefinitely. Under the pressing need for reduction of the total budget every item ought to be scrutinized for savings which will force greater efficiency in governmental operations.

Work For Prisoners.

In this period of widespread unemployment of free workmen there is a tendency to forget the critical problem of idleness in prisons. Undoubtedly our first concern should go to the law-abiding citizen who is without the means of livelihood. Yet to ignore the demoralizing plight of prisoners who, for want of anything else to do, plot new crimes while they are housed and fed at the expense of taxpayers is to impose a terrific burden upon all society.

It is good news, therefore, that this age-old problem of putting convicts to work without bringing them directly into competition with free labor is at last being attacked in a practical way. The new plan was outlined before the annual congress of the American Prison Association in Atlanta on Monday, by Judge Joseph N. Ulman, chairman of the Prison Industries Reorganization Board. If accepted by all the States it may well revolutionize industrial enterprises that operate within prison walls.

Competition between free and convict labor became particularly acute under the NRA codes. Efforts to iron out a controversy between the prison labor authority and the garment trade led to a study of the entire problem. In creating the board of which Judge Ulman is chairman, the President instructed it to recommend a program of reorganizing prison industries with the double objective of avoiding competition in free markets and of eliminating idleness among prisoners. Loans or grants from the Federal Government to institute the plan are also suggested.

The significance of this move is the coordination which it offers for States that are trying to maintain an exchange system for prison-made goods. For a number of years the States-use system has been in limited operation. But even this plan of restricting prison products to official usage has broken down for want of co-operation among governmental agencies. In Maryland Penitentiary, for example, 900 of the 1,100 inmates now do no work whatever.

It may be impossible to put all prisoners to work supplying the needs of governmental agencies, but under a properly coordinated plan a long step forward can certainly be taken. The enthusiasm which has been manifested over this new approach offers the greatest hope in years that the curse of idleness in American prisons will be minimized.

On The Basis Of Merit.

As establishment of the Social Security organization proceeds the care with which its personnel is being chosen becomes steadily more impressive. No doubt it will be a long time before the permanent organization is completed, since appointments can be made at present only indirectly through the Department of Labor. But the lack of speed in assembling a staff, due to the failure of the deficiency appropriations bill, is more than offset by the special qualifications of the few key men thus far chosen.

Especially important is the selection of a trained sociologist and experienced administrator to become executive director. Frank B. Bane has been director of the American Public Welfare Association since 1932. His experience in work of this type, however, goes back at least to 1920, when he became associated with the Virginia Board of Charities and Corrections. Since then he has served as Virginia's commissioner of public welfare and as professor of sociology at the University of Virginia. In 1930-31 he was also a member of the President's Emergency Employment Commission.

The appointment of Henry P. Seidemann, accounting and budget expert, to act as coordinator of the social security set-up, suggests the importance which the board properly attaches to the actuarial soundness of its program. Mr. Seidemann's official posts are too numerous to recount here, but his work as executive of the numerous surveys of State administrative systems, conducted by the Institute for Government Research of the Brookings Institution, suggests his experience in this field. More than any other single man, moreover, he was responsible for the careful preliminary spade work which preceded the establishment of our national budgetary system.

Two experts who rendered valuable service to the Committee on Economic Security may be expected to be no less useful in the application of the policies which that body formulated. They are Thomas H. Eliot, associate solicitor in the Department of Labor, who will become general counsel to the board, and Merrill Murray, expert on unemployment insurance, who will be the board's adviser on that subject.

In each case these positions have been filled clearly on the basis of merit alone. If the board can uphold that standard in the selection of all its major personnel, the administrative end of the social security system will be inaugurated under the most favorable circumstances.

Modernized Crusoe.

The mystery of Paul Redfern opens new vistas for an entirely different type of adventure story. Shipwrecks were the old way of casting heroes upon desert islands where they had to take a chance on being picked up by a passing ship. But a modern Robinson Crusoe nose-dives out of an airplane and years later becomes the subject of official dispatches between nations while members of the Army Air Corps stand by ready to lead the search for him. And an intriguing part of the story is that if Redfern had succeeded in establishing a new air record in 1927, as he set out to do, in all probability he would have been forgotten by now. Paradoxically, when he flew into oblivion eight years ago, he also flew into fame.

It was to be expected, assuming his continued existence, that rumors would turn up periodically concerning Redfern's whereabouts. He has been reported at various times as having been seen among the Shuara, the Itabo, and the Kirikiriscota tribes of Dutch Guiana. If he did descend from the clouds onto some remote tribal village, the event was doubtless regarded as a supernatural occurrence. Reports tell of his being "crippled and aged." It is thought his lame condition is one reason why he has been unable to regain civilization.

But worth consideration is the possibility that he might be satisfied with life in the wilds to the extent that he has chosen to remain there of his own accord. It seems a far cry from a sleepy Georgian town to a country of trees tangled by giant orchids, infested by tropical diseases, and roamed by savage beasts. But like the Britisher in "Lost Horizon," it is entirely possible that the young southerner has found complete contentment in a life where machine guns, automobile accidents, unemployment and racketeering are unknown.

The State Department is making careful investigation of the latest reports that Redfern is still alive and his family is going through another period of suspense. It is to be hoped for their sakes, as well as his that this is not just another beach-comber's illusion. The suggested route of rescue is a dangerous one and must be undertaken partly in canoes, partly on foot. But there is not a boy or man living who would not gladly risk all the hazards for the sake of being the one to say, at the end of the journey, "Mr. Redfern, I presume?"

Ohio's Governor is outraged because college football stars are getting State jobs. What's the world coming to, he wants to know, when a triple-threat man must be cared for ahead of the fellow whose pappy voted the Democratic ticket?—Detroit News.

"Proof of man's mental superiority is the fact that he is the only animal that laughs," says a college professor. Yes, but he's usually laughing at some fool thing another man did.

A Mistitled Barn Owl.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We wish to congratulate you and to chide you, both, for a very interesting article published in your paper on September 22 entitled "Destroy Predatory Birds and Protect Them Too, Uncle Sam is Urged."

Dr. W. L. McAtee, of the Biological Survey, who is freely quoted in this article, is the leading expert on matters of this sort in the country and has a very sane idea of how all these matters should be handled. We have only praise for his point of view and for that part of your article. We do regret, however, the errors in captions and pictures which appeared with it, on the barn owl in the center, which is 98 per cent a beneficial bird, more valuable to the agriculturist and the public at large than the robin, or even the bluebird, due to its feeding almost exclusively on destructive rats and mice. It was captioned in your picture as a "thief and a killer," which is most unfortunate and incorrect.

You refer to the cuckoo as a "bad actor," undoubtedly under the misapprehension that our American species are similar in their parasitic habits to the European cuckoo, a different bird entirely. The European cuckoo lays its eggs in other birds' nests, and indirectly destroys beneficial birds because the larger cuckoo nestlings throw out the original offspring. The only bird that indulges in that sort of thing in the United States, regularly, is the cow bird.

We were glad to see that you said the bald eagle is much maligned and not as predatory as he is supposed to be, but your caption indicated a cuckoo, which was shown to the left.

We appreciate that such line-up difficulties are bound to happen, but we do wish to register our protest in favor of the barn owl, which destroyed thousands of rats in Washington itself when they lived near the tower of the Smithsonian Building. WARREN F. EATON, Marking Virginia Ballots.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since so many of your readers are residents of the Virginia section of the metropolitan area, and since there will be an election on November 5 to fill the various county offices in Virginia, it will be of interest to the voters there, and especially to many of the newcomers, to have a word of warning with respect to the proper manner of marking ballots under Virginia law.

In many other sections of the country the voters merely puts a cross mark in front of the name of the candidate for whom he wishes to vote. Ballots marked in that fashion would be thrown out in Virginia. Under the Virginia law the voter must draw a line through the names of the candidates for whom he does not wish to vote and leave untouched the name of the candidate for whom he wishes to vote.

In many cases the voter draws his line hastily, and instead of getting it through a name he gets it above or below the name, and here again the ballot must be thrown out. The line must extend at least three-quarters of the distance through the name being canceled.

Further, many ballots are thrown out because the voter votes for more candidates than there are offices. For example, the ballot in the coming election in Arlington County will contain the names of 16 candidates for county board. There are only five to be elected. If the voter leaves more than five names uncanceled the ballot will be thrown out, as far as that particular office is concerned.

Fire With Fire.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You deserve generous praise for publishing "Red Menace Apoplexy," by Karl Schriftgiesser, on your editorial feature page of Monday, October 28. To be sure, there are those of us who think such expositions should be given more prominence, published, say, either as the leading editorial or given front page position, perhaps set two columns, 10-point, well leaded. But it may be that our feeling in the matter springs from the urge to see fire fought with fire.

However, there is a possibility that we, as laymen, but very interested observers, realize that all too often the public—including ourselves, even—are sometimes inclined to wonder whether or not Mr. Hearst may not be barking up a tree which really has some sort of a "varmint" in it. Probably you have too much faith in us; probably you are able to view the continuous rantings objectively, understanding them as part of circulation campaign and further evidence of the current trend of journalistic exhibitionism. All that may or may not be; in any event, we are happy to see you deliver one blow to offset the opposition's flailings. That one blow, we trust, represents a straw in the wind.

We have wondered no little why there hasn't been such before. Surely the editors of America realize that continual Red-baiting is little more than shadow-boxing; but, just as surely, they must realize that it is likely to become dangerous if allowed to go on unopposed indefinitely. You can't kill a thing like that by simply ignoring it; it is now far too big for that sort of passive opposition; the whole Nation is still nervous, even to the point of jitters. We are convalescing (we hope) from a major economic malady; our strength is returning very slowly. And it is up to level-headed editors such as yourself to modulate, somehow, for us the noise of beating drums and shooting cap pistols.

Well-Wishing Peace Lovers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, Secretary Hull has spoken—the same old glittering generalities; the same old lip service for peace. Sure, we want peace. But all we do is that which is incited and motivated with and by our old desire to save our own skins! We wish you all well, with a patronizing slap on the back. But when it comes to practical, efficient cooperation with you to squelch a declared war "aggressor" we again hide behind our well-worn slogan of "No advance commitments."

Sure, we give our moral support. But as for a participation in a world-wide boycott against the modern Caesar, we beg to be excused. We fear it might draw us in. Some fine morning when we are protecting "our" interests in China against Japan, the shoe may be on the other foot, and then we, not they, will necessarily be asking them "What are you going to do in the circumstances?" And their answer should be: "No advance commitments."

Isolation? Bah! There never was any such animal, either man or nation; and it was proved when in 1917 we got sucked in—notwithstanding "heap big" proclamations, etc. A. G. STAR.

The League And The Grab Game.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A very widely read article by Frank Simonds in the Saturday Evening Post for October 5 deserves analysis and criticism. It begins with a wise arraignment of the great powers' indifference to the needs of Japan, Italy and Germany in 1919. This is now painfully being brought home to everyone, and has been recognized at Geneva. Privileged persons are only very recently being forced to see that modern civilization requires of them to recognize that unearned increment from nature's treasures in the earth or from what the public has made valuable must not make one a millionaire. Slowly we are recognizing the truth of the words of the great Bishop Brent: "International affairs are just as much the business of the citizen as national affairs. Man's first allegiance is to mankind."

Mr. Simonds rightly condemns the lack of imagination and fair play on the part of privileged powers. But it is lamentable and dangerous talk which he indulges in excoriating the League of Nations. He is absolutely pessimistic as to the great nations ever dealing fairly with weaker ones, and he neglects much pertinent evidence.

The small Scandinavian and some other nations look to the League with confidence. Recent utterances of Sir Samuel Hoare show that he recognizes the new approach to the juster distribution of lands and the obligation of helping the underprivileged. Granted that Italy needs many raw materials which she does not produce; but would not free trade among nations chiefly provide them? Mr. Simonds says: "To prevent war it is now clear that nations have to make it." He confounds genuine war, such as Italy wages, with the type of police force that is used in collective action, with no gain to anyone.

To assume, as Mr. Simonds does, that the old grab game is inevitable, means that civilization can make no progress. The whole history of the trade of the small nations shows that the political prestige of the great ones gives them practically no commercial advantage. Norway's carrying trade was proportionately three times as great as that of England before the war.

Mr. Simonds ignores all the constructive work of the League and has no substitute to offer except the explosives and poison gas that proved so futile in 1914 and 1917 to achieve anything but, as Secretary Dern said, "a failure, a victory for no one." When he asserts that "there is no other means than war by which countries can climb to heights which more fortunate nations have already achieved," he is preaching the devil's doctrine and playing into the hands of the munitions makers. The Rush Bagot agreement, which gave us the safe and unguarded Canadian border, and scores of other illustrations, did space permit, show how crude and unjustified in his conclusion.

The Post Impressionist

Wilbur Of The CCC.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

PROUST has reached Skyland. That ought to be the limit. Of course, he may, even yet, go farther—but, anyway, here is the evidence that he has got so far. It is a dispatch from the column's special correspondent with the CCC.

Dear Post-Impressionist:

What would you do if someone with the best intentions sent you a copy of the Yale Review while you were in a CCC camp? Perhaps the old mental courage would return, and, in spite of calls from fellow enrollees—

"Yah, yah, yah, dat guy's a dope. Lookit him! Tryin' to read one of them books what don't have no sense in them. One of them intellectools. Ah, t'row dat dope in de crick!"

—you would read the magazine from Saroyan to Lewis Mumford and the book reviews.

Wilbur Suttle was not sure sufficient courage remained. Whenever he opened the thing, a door creaked or feet scuffed along the gravel outside of headquarters. Of course, he might hide the review between the covers of "Lurid Confessions"—that is, if he could do so without a fellow enrollee sneaking up behind him and discovering his crime.

Alone for the moment—one precious moment of solitude—Wilbur looked at the patches of window panes; headlights illuminated by the office lamps. Each pane was a reflection of something out of his past. Beyond those dark patches paraded all the ghosts of E. E. Cummings' "Enormous Room."

By now, Wilbur was acutely aware of the life histories of the enrollees in his barracks—and of many outside his barracks. Yesterday was just like today, and today would in all probability be like tomorrow, or even the day after tomorrow.

Still, there were some differences about the place. Each group of individuals from a particular area brought a particular impression and mind. Wilbur, watching the dark patches, remembered that Marcel Proust had written about this before the production of boondoggling and CCC camps. The words arranged themselves neatly across Wilbur's mind, projected cinema-like from the darkness outside:

"Last of all, and even more general than the family heritage, was the rich layer imposed by the native province from which they derived their voices and of which, indeed, their intonations smacked . . ."

There was nothing, it seemed, to remove the heritage of the past—and, there was nothing to cling more tenaciously than the memory of things so recently gone. Wilbur Suttle drummed at the keys of the typewriter and repeated, ever so quietly:

"The bear went over the mountain—
The bear went over the mountain—
Oh, the bear went over the mountain
The year before the war!"

People were always singing about going over the mountain—but so few of them ever went. Even when they went physically, they were always returning mentally to the place and the things they had left.

Right now, Wilbur could get good and homesick for an old-timey game of set-back or checkers with his grandfather. His grandfather was dead, and yet Wilbur couldn't think of his grandfather going away—because he was still too much a part of the environment and life he had left.

Take that song about the bear going over the mountain. It was ages old. You could find it in Bach's "Night on Bear Mountain." But that didn't explain its presence in these hills, nor did it explain the lingering of the old English dialect . . .

Perhaps Wilbur should escape and forget it all. Perhaps this poor enrollee might find a haven of rest with the patron saint of the military: Nietzche—pehraps not. Zarathustra seemed an ill omen.

* * *

Wilbur contemplated the black patches of night framed in the window. Outside danced the ghosts of Cummings' "Enormous Room." There was little noise inside beyond the ringing of the 'phone.

Wilbur listened to the rings: wto shorts and a long.

"Our call," he said to himself. Then he addressed the telephone: "Calling us, are you? Well, this time, I'm not going to answer. This time, you can go to hell."

And he opened the Yale Review.

Fair Enough

Orchid Man.

Paris, October 29.

THIS little narrative might be called a tale of two saloons. It was on a nice day in early summer when Georges Carpentier arrived in New York. A crowd of regular ships news men who went down the bay on the cutter that morning was augmented by sport writers, many of whom had stayed up all night, and a number of lady journalists, who were to write the "woman's angle."

The "woman's angle" is a sturdy myth of American journalism. The emancipated woman smokes as many cigarettes as a man and has learned to carry her whisky like a gentleman, but there still survives that kind of lady reporter who, no matter how hard-boiled she is or how acute is her hangover in the dawn's early light down by Battery Wall, cannot resist writing into her composition soft and lovely words and sentiments of which her brothers in inkstained wretchedness are incapable.

The ladies, God bless them, know what is expected of them and always make good, though sometimes they swear over their typewriters. On this occasion lady journalists wrote about Mr. Carpentier's pale eyes and taffy-colored straight hair, which flopped over his eyes in a Raymond Hitchcock bang; his straight nose, unmarked by glove or shrapnel; the straight line of his jaw and the little gold ribbon of Medaille Militaire in his lapel.

* * * *

THAT was the woman's angle. He was a very pretty man and, anyway, the United States was still squirming in the throes of a great national crush on La Belle France. Soon M. Carpentier was receiving mail by the bushel and so much of this correspondence came in scented envelopes that the room in which it was dumped reeked like an Italian barbershop. Jack Curley became his social sponsor, starting him on a career which routed him amid pleasures and palaces on Long Island, and there even came a time when M. Carpentier and the Prince of Wales, after an evening's harmless mischief, pulled up at dawn in the guest room of Mr. Curley's humble cottage, with Mr. Curley, in Mr. Curley's pajamas, serving scrambled eggs and coffee shaken together by his own hospitable hands.

M. Carpentier was called the Orchid Man, but rather oddly it was not a lady reporter writing from the woman's angle who invented this pretty description, but a fight reporter accustomed to dealing in volleys of furious lefts and rights to the face and body.

* * * *

SO there came the great day when Tex Rickard asked Jack Dempsey not to knock him out too soon, because all those nice people had paid $1,500,000 to see the fight. M. Carpentier, honestly misled by his spurious success in the first round, popped Dempsey on the chin in round two. "That mug got fresh with me," Mr. Dempsey said when he returned to his corner, and Jack Kearns, his manager, said, "Yes, the bum, that's what you get for doing him a favor. Go on out and knock him over."

Mr. Dempsey is now a saloon keeper and a colleague in the liquor business of such eminent fellow Americans as John D. Rockefeller, jr., Al Smith and Vincent Astor, whose St. Regis Hotel recently solemnized the dedication of a new cafe. Mr. Dempsey is robust, strong and prominent in the community and a loving husband and father, who leaves the saloon at midnight to go home and dine with his wife and spend a half hour playing with his little daughter.

* * * *

1,000 Will Seek Prizes In Frederick Carnival

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 29.—More than 1,000 individuals and several bands and drum corps will compete for prizes in the annual Halloween parade and carnival here Thursday night. The event is sponsored by the Lions Club.

Byron A. Winebrenner, president of the club and general chairman for the event, has named the following committees: Charles E. Hudson, Edward M. Akers, Harry F. Shipley, Clinton M. Rhoads and Emory B. Shipley, parade; Charles A. Opel, jr., H. L. Michael and J. M. Wolfe, prizes; H. David Hagan, Capt. Bernard C. Morris and Irving S. Biser, music; Biser, John S. Renn and Herman C. Gubisch, publicity. Market street, from Patrick to Third, will be roped off from 6:30 to 10:30 for the celebration. Prizes will be awarded at City Hall.

Plans But No Planks

Middle West Republicans Prevented From Using Ammunition Offered By The New Deal, Explaining Borah's Revival Of Musty Trust-Busting Issue.

By Hilding Siverson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Kansas City.

THE framers of the Republican platform of 1936 will be sniped by enemies from all directions, and the complications caused by the AAA in the Middle West exemplify their troubles. Never before has there existed just such a situation. Never before has an "out" party received such a wealth of ammunition, and never before has an "out" party been in such a poor position to use that ammunition.

Even if the national committee shows signs of consciousness, there will still be the large and somewhat motley horde of Republican Senators and Representatives to be heard from.

Senators and Representatives have always been given special privilege in the framing of the platforms of the two old parties, on the naive assumption that they know more about what should be party policy than anyone else. There are good reasons for believing that if the Republicans in the Senate and House are given free reign in the convention of 1936, the platform will be a bizarre document indeed.

The tactics of the New Deal leaders were so aggressive and breath-taking from 1933 to 1935 that few Republicans in Congress had the hardihood to stand up boldly and be counted against the New Deal. Many of them were stampeded and voted for the AAA, the NRA and other alphabetical bureaucracies. Naturally they are going to shush any utterances that seem to reflect on their own voting records. If all these Congressmen are consulted and given a voice in the platform-making, the Republican platform of 1936 will probably have little in it except a courageous endorsement of the sixth commandment and a ringing demand that America keep out of the Hedjaz.

* * * *

IF Norris, Frazier, Hiram Johnson, Capper, Nye, Borah and their political relatives are consulted, the Republican platform will have to hit the Democratic party with a puff-ball and let it go at that. But even some of the more permanent Republicans have tender spots and will demand special immunity.

This condition, of course, is especially true in the Middle West, the chief reason being the embarrassing AAA.

Take Western Kansas, for instance, Clifford Hope, representative from this district, is not only acquiescent to the AAA. He is violently and outspokenly in favor of it. When an observer studies the situation, he can understand how this comes to pass. Wheat, which has long been the mainstay in Hope's district, has been a failure for several years. When a farmer has failed to raise a wheat crop for that long and when the Government offers him a check, under the gracious label of the AAA, even though he has produced no wheat upon which to levy a processing tax, which is supposed to furnish the money, that farmer doesn't stop to study the underlying philosophy of AAA. He just grabs at it like a hungry bass after a minnow, not looking it over for concealed hooks, and no wonder. Anybody would. You can't blame the farmer a bit. And so, naturally, the nominally Republican representative from this district, hankering for re-election, doesn't discuss the hooks underlying the philosophy of AAA. He just says, in effect: "Of course we want the AAA. It means ready cash to the farmers of my district. Will I vote for it? And will a fish swim?"

* * * *

IT IS painful to note that many great policies of our great Government are settled in just that way. Lofty idealists may assume that the voting represents a new realization that there are sweeping principles of economic justice involved—that "parity" is to be realized at last, and all that sort of thing. Let them not unduly kid themselves. There is not a "new day," yet. There is a very old and sordid day—a day in which politicians acutely know on which side their bread is buttered, and where the votes come from and why—and so they make their ringing declarations to fit the pattern.

In spite of surface indications to the contrary there is reason to believe that the AAA is riding for a fall. The potato control climax is just what many critics of the AAA have long predicted and expected. It is the reductio ad absurdum of the whole crop control and crop benefit program—the logical conclusion of the whole matter. And when the scheme goes farther, as it eventually and inexorably must, to include rutabagas, clams, crabapples, wall-eyed pike and horseradish; the whole thing will break down of its own weight.

A significant change is taking place in which the farmers of Iowa, first to indorse the AAA, still signify their liking for crop benefits but voice a growing suspicion of the AAA and the whole New Deal. The Des Moines Register prints periodical expressions from farmers, taken at random on the rural routes. A recent installment unlike previous ones, showed a preponderance of expressions against the New Deal and a marked falling off in enthusiasm for the AAA. Inasmuch as the Register editorially cheers the AAA, this may prove to be an important drift.

* * * *

THE Republican politicians of the Middle West, as a rule, however, are still afraid of the AAA. The cash benefit still speaks a potent and mystic language. If the platform were to be written now, the Middle West Republicans would either "lay off" the AAA or indorse it outright. The Springfield "grass-roots" convention clearly indicated that.

Senator Borah's recent letter to Col. Theodore Roosevelt suggesting that the old trust issue be taken out, dusted off and used as a plank, instead of the more conspicuous ones now being discussed, is symptomatic of the demand that will grow and become more vocal among Senators and Representatives. Many of them will endeavor to sidestep the assorted ruckuses created by President Roosevelt because they don't feel entirely ready to face those issues clear down the line. It is pretty safe to say that if the Old Guard leadership in the National Committee on one hand, and the Republican nibblers of the New Deal cake on the other hand, are allowed to dictate the planks for the 1936 Republican platform, there won't be anything to the 1936 campaign but sound and fury, and the Republican Party may as well save its ammunition.

The only prospect for a virile, constructive, outspoken, uncompromising Republican platform at this time seems to be in the Young Republican group, which is independent of the congressional crowd as well as somewhat saucy to the organization crowd.

On second thought, some are beginning to think that it might be a smart thing for the Republican convention of 1936 to go before the country without any platform at all, since the New Dealers have conclusively proved that a platform doesn't mean anything anyhow.

WPA Puts 100 More To Work in Frederick

Frederick, Md., Oct. 29.—An even 100 additional men went to work on WPA projects in Frederick County yesterday, bringing the total given employment during the past ten days to 235. The local Federal reemployment office has been working overtime to fill the demand for laborers and truck drivers. Work on the million-dollar sewerage project is expected to start about December 1.

A $3,555 allotment for a sewage-disposal plant at Montevue Hospital, county almshouse, has been approved by WPA officials. The recent grand jury condemned insanitary conditions at the almshouse.

119 From Out of State.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 29.—The State Teachers College disclosed today that it has 119 out-of-State students on its 1935-36 roster and that North Carolina, with 26, leads the list. Nineteen other States, the District of Columbia, the Canal Zone and Puerto Rico are represented.

No End Of Books

North And South.

LINCOLN Ellsworth has scant comfort or encouragement for those adventurous souls who yearn to march a pair of boots into new realms of exploration. Not that the realms don't exist, as he tells in the virile, readable pages of "Exploring Today" (Dodd Mead, $1.75)—the stratosphere, the deep sea, Antarctica, even our own Southwest, lie all but untouched for the curious. But expeditions are now make up of scientific specialists; you must be an archeologist, or botanist, or anthroposomatologist (good grief!), or at least a combined airplane pilot-navigator-mechanic, and a darned good one to boot, in order to find a berth on an expedition. And when all of you go afield, you advance with the intricate order and discipline of an army. Dr. Andrew's expeditions to the Gobi Desert and the Whitney South Seas expedition are examples of this modern technique.

It would seem, though, that Mr. Ellsworth doth protest too much. With one breath he blows cool, austere, and scientific. And with another he tells of young Dan Thrapp who, so late as last spring, found southeast Utah an unknown and exciting country; or of Mrs. Burden's adventures with the giant lizards of Komodo Island; or of Edward Thompson's descent by diving suit to the bottom of the sacred well of Chichen Itza, Yucatan, where the Mayas had thrown gold ornaments and fair, sacrificial maidens; or even the calmer delights of Dr. Albert Brand recording American birds with movie-camera and sound-track film. One degree or another of heady, explorative joy spring from these reports from other wanderlusters, and in Mr. Ellsworth's own fossil discoveries in the Grand Canyon or his famous flight by dirigible over the North Pole in 1926.

But nevertheless the prison house of forethought begins to close. Mr. Ellsworth advises thorough fitness, exhaustive equipment and preparation. As a matter of fact, the thrill is now sniffed at, for, as Stefansson says of present-day exploration, "Adventures are a mark of incompetence."

* * * *

THIS kind of austerity would tend to make our travel reading pretty sad stuff—not many people are going to get armchair palpitations over the paleo-botany of the Gobi Desert. We must still look, for the vicarious pleasures of traveling, to such men as Rockwell Kent. He doesn't care a hoot about lichens, but in the entirely captivating pages of "Salamina" (Harcourt Brace, $3.75) he does tell us vividly and rapturously what it is like to live with the natives on the west coast of Greenland. The building of this house, at Igdlorssuit, the solemn day-long "kaffemiks" (coffee-parties and the exuberent night-long dances, the whale-hunts, the kayak-men, the feud with the grasping trader, the whole gallery of jovial natives, and finally his amazing housekeeper, Salamina herself—these Mr. Kent presents so well that our pleasure in them is as intense as his. The book is chockfull of Kent drawings, and that alone should be enough for many people.

Norman Lewis, English photographer, took a canoe through France, a train through Spain, saw a revolution in Madrid and low-life in North Africa. "Spanish Adventure" (Holt, $3) is thus a somewhat inadequate title for a book filled with many a sharp and amusing observation, and dotted with vague but lovely photographs. I liked the tale of the Russian portrait painter in Casablanca, Morocco, who couldn't get the local nabobs to pay for the portraits they had ordered. He planned his revenge nicely. He was going to go off somewhere and hang all their portraits up in an exhibition labeled "Criminal Types of North Africa."

Burden of A Nation

Realty Business Picks Up, Especially in St. Louis Area.

By Felix Bruner.

St. Louis (by mail).—From St. Louis one gets a view of the wheat-growing business of the Northwest, of the corn belt, and of the cotton States. It is a hub around which much of America's great agricultural empire radiates.

From St. Louis one gets the impression that relief has come to the farm. It has come from two sources, from the AAA, and from nature itself. Which has had the most influence is hard to tell.

In the city, it is the same old monotonous story of thousands of unemployed for whom there are no jobs, of endless Government red tape and delay in providing jobs, and with the ever-present knowledge that these jobs, when they are provided, are only temporary stopgaps and that all the dreary process must one day start over.

Last year farmers were complaining of the drought. Dust filled the air and choked the lungs. The year before that they were complaining of low prices. This year they are complaining, even though they themselves are among the beneficiaries, of excess Government expenditures. But this complaint, perhaps, is not so loud nor so insistent as were the other two.

No Longer Borrow.

Cotton farmers, coming up from Arkansas and Tennessee on buying expeditions, are no longer borrowing money from the Government. The loans amount to only 10 cents a pound, and the price is well above that figure now. It is more profitable to sell than to borrow from the Government. Of course, they are not hesitating to take advantage of Government bounty, making up the difference between the selling price and 12 cents a pound.

Wheat and corn farmers from Iowa and Kansas and Illinois are selling at comparatively high prices. Those who raise livestock are smiling, while housewives all over the country are wondering how to serve meat and still keep within the family budget. The farmers are not much inclined to argue about whether the AAA or the drought brought about the scarcity of hogs. They are collecting and buying new living-room suites, and new shoes and stoves to heat the house. Stove factories here—St. Louis makes most of the country's stoves—and shoe factories, which have moved here from New England, are working six days a week. The shoe business in September was 9 per cent above a year ago.

Real Estate Moving.

The real estate business, especially in small rural towns in this section, is picking up. Some towns have reported that they have no vacant storerooms and that residence building is on the increase.

Prosperity here, however, is admittedly artificial. It is based on farm benefit payments. Few seem willing to face the question of what will happen when these benefits expire or if the Supreme Court should suddenly declare the agriculture act unconstitutional. The ending of NRA apparently meant litle anywhere. The ending of AAA would be little short of tragic, especially to cotton growers.

Wages on the farms, according to the Federal Reserve Bank review for this district, are the highest since 1931. Farm hands working by the day are paid 95 cents and their board. Without board they receive $1.25 a day. Monthly wages, with board, are $19 and without board, $27. Subsistence wages in cities run from $44 to $55 a month. Some farm workers are leaving the land and going on relief in the cities.

Ozark Farmers Aided.

Down in the Ozark Mountains farmers are being rehabilitated. They didn't take so kindly to the idea at first. They thought there must be a catch in anything that was called by so long a name. But now the Government has applications from 4,040 of them who want to be rehabilitated.

"They changed their tune in a hurry when they found out what it was all about," said John F. Nicholson, State administrator for the Resettlement Administration. He said they had been told that the Government was forcing them off their land. He said about 400 farmers and their families had moved off their unproductive land to other property and that others had been helped.

Rehabilitation consists usually of extension of Government credit for long terms at a low interest rate and in amount based on what is needed by a farmer to put him on a profitable basis.

"If he needs a cow, we get him one," Nicholson said. "If it's a team of horses, we supply that, or a flock of chickens, or a new plow."

The Resettlement Administration takes what security the applicant can offer. For small loans nothing but the farmer's signature is required. The loans average $350. On October 1 the administration in this State had loaned $1,500,000.

Take Personal Notes.

In addition, the administration has made 33,000 loans for livestock feed with no security but signatures on notes. Cows were given to 2,800 relief families on the same basis.

When a farmer becomes a borrower the administration assigns a supervisor to help him plan his crops and business to the best advantage. Fifty-five of these supervisors operate in Missouri, augmented by 25 women who keep an eye on the farm homes.

Plans are being made to establish two resettlement groups in southeastern and southwestern Missouri, Nicholson said. These groups will consist of farm families moved from unproductive tracts or submarginal lands before the beginning of next season.

The latest Government move is a plan to purchase 16,500 acres of land bordering the Lake of the Ozarks for $268,000. The land will be developed for recreational purposes by the CCC and the Works Progress Administration. An allocation of $443,000 has been made for the WPA work. It is estimated that 893 men will be employed under WPA auspices in reforestation and the construction of game refuges, parks and camping grounds in the area. A number of families will be moved off the land, which is classed as poor and unproductive.

The game preserves will be stocked with turkey, quail, pheasant, grouse, deer and other wild game. When the work is completed control will pass to the State.

Kump Is Expected At Apple Festival

Three-Day Show Opens Tuesday in Martinsburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Gov. H. G. Kump is arranging to attend the revived annual apple show here next Tuesday, and to preside at the coronation ceremonies at which Harry V. Miller, of Paw Paw, will be crowned Apple King of West Virginia, it was announced today.

The coronation ceremonies will be held at the market house Tuesday. The show will last three days.

Among other distinguished visitors expected are Commissioner of Agriculture J. B. McLaughlin; Dean Frederick D. Fromme, of the State College of Agriculture, and Mrs. Fromme, of Morgantown; West Virginia University's new president, Chauncey S. Boucher, and Mrs. Boucher also are planning to attend.

Special displays will include a booth by Young Farmers Association, exhibiting raw and manufactured Eastern Panhandle soil products; a booth showing the byproducts manufactured from apples, and displays by the principal apple growers and distributors of apples in this area.

Ruth Tonry Elected.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Miss Ruth Tonry was named president of the Martinsburg High School Chapter of the National Honor Society at a meeting yesterday. Lorene Taylor was named secretary and Louise Copenhaver treasurer. The seven seniors named to the chapter in addition to the officers include Aldia Cage, Mullen Coover, Donald Grove and Horace Trout.

Club Gardens Plans Birthday Fete Halloween

Capital's Nighteries to Stage a Variety of Goblin Season Specialties.

By Chanticleer.

Tomorrow night is more than Halloween at the suburban Maryland Club Gardens. It's the anniversary—first anniversary—of the opening of the big winter garden room. And with this in mind a special floor show has been billed for this entire week.

Heading the new show is the international dance team—Byrnes and Swanson, who already are known to you if you've been to Manhattan's Paradise Restaurant in the last few months. Next is Mae Miller, acrobatic dancer . . . Fran Trappe, accordionist . . . Sid Allan and his orchestra . . . and last, but not least, a new master of ceremonies, Brian McDonald, who barytones as well.

Mary Jo Hamilton (who looks mighty familiar to the old Gingham Club crowds as she sings with the new Phil Lynch orchestra these days) has a novel way of putting her vocal apparatus in flawless shape just before making an appearance. She eats pickles! They're supposed to guarantee a cleared throat.

Halloween at the Dude Ranch will be a long—and of course noteworthy—event. It's an all-night party. If you had dropped in out there (Baltimore pike at Berwyn) these last few days you'd have found Jimmy Staley, ace singer at Milt Barrett's nightery, handling a hammer and saw with the best of the carpenters who put the finishing touches this week on the new band shell.

• • • •

They're finally coming around to it at the Hamilton Rainbow Room. Meaning that Washington has responded so well to Dick Butler's new cocktailery that additional space is being added.

• • • •

Rudy Schramm is playing these evenings at Ramon's, up on Connecticut avenue, probably the oldest, or at least one of the oldest, late supper spots in town. In addition to playing almost anything you can think up to request, Rudy is a very grand guy.

• • • •

Another birthday celebration comes off Thursday night—at the Broadmoor Silver Grill. Just a year ago that night Albert Mueller and Marius Manon began their happy new venture. And properly to observe the occasion a whopping big floor show of five acts is being brought down from New York. Properly speaking, it's to be a Halloween ball, however.

• • • •

It will be a de luxe dinner, noise makers and favors at the Habana tomorrow night. However, Moe Baer and Host Scott have drawn the line at games played with the pumpkins and squashes used in the decorative scheme of things.

• • • •

It's a handpicked show at the Lotus Restaurant this week. Dick Lam did the job and what a job, too. Just look it over: First, the European dancers, Balasi and Sharan, specially selected because of their "Black Cat and Mouse" number . . . next, the O'Hea Sisters, formerly with N. T. G. in New York and Warner Brothers . . . Don and Jean, Loew circuit stars in hot-cha numbers and fast rhythms . . . and little Judy Ellington and Al Norton giving plenty with Bill Strickland's Capitolians.

• • • •

They're champions, ladeez and gentlemun. Ernestine and Joseph, tap dancing experts, they are, at the Madrillon this week. And don't let anyone ever tell you a fat boy can't dance! Joseph is pretty much on the chubby side. But light as a feather on his feet. He follows their Dutch and Spanish numbers with a couple of solos to prove that weight is no factor.

• • • •

Griffith Farms features a special Halloween dance Thursday night, with the Varsity Six on hand to provide the inspiration. It sounds very elegant with open log fires and the country atmosphere . . . "Red Sails in the Sunset" is the newest favorite of Bamboo Room followers, over t' the Willard.

• • • •

Here's an idea for the very busy Halloween nighter who can't make one of the super clubs. Drop in at the Willard Corner, where Joseph, ye olde mixologist, will dispense the cheer of the evening as well as excellent concoctions.

• • • •

Johnny Slaughter brings the spirit of "Mardi Gras" to the Wardman Park Continental Room Thursday night with a Halloween party—all the gayety and fun of carnival time—favors and bright entertainment from the Polomar Club out Los Angeles way. Johnny presents Doreane and Douglass, whose modern dances graced the Edgewater Beach Hotel floor before the trek west.

Decorators are busy at this very moment completing the transformation of the Shoreham ballroom into a Halloween setting for tomorrow night, and the smart guys already are phoning reservations. Another dance team from out of the West—Kirk and Lawrence—head the floor show with a novel rough-riding props horse act. Vito and Piri are staying over a second week and Lew Hoffman and his "Top Hats" are picking the applause up in baskets. Barnee for the dancing.

• • • •

They're going to open the Russian Troika all over again Halloween night, so to speak. It's interesting to note that the Troika is the only night spot in town to engage entertainers by a whole season . . . but at least three are so employed: Vladimir Diloff, basso; Karavieff, emmcee and dancer, and Ethel Pastor, lovely soprano. And then Halloween night comes Marusia Sava, gypsy singer, who will be remembered from last winter at the Troika.

• • • •

That first amateur night show of Emory Daugherty's was a great success. Christine West was the lucky winner, singing "L'Amour, Toujours L'Armour," with second prize to Marguerite Costello, who sang "I Aint Got Nobody." Forty were auditioned, ten were heard. And, of course, there'll be another next Monday night.

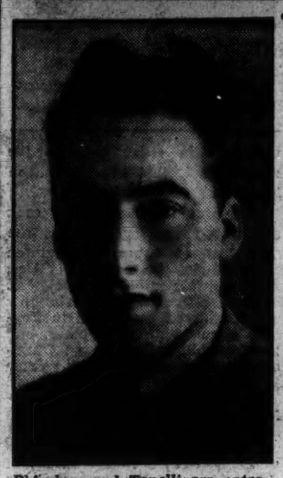
• • • •

There'll be a Russian flavor to Halloween at the Club Volga Boatman. Matt Windsor still remembers the spirit of the holiday of his native country and so—things will be a little different at this nightery. In Russia, it's a bit more spooky than here. If you really want to see what a spook is like—drop in at the Volga Boatman tomorrow night. They're taking reservations.

• • • •

Enders and Borgia, ace dancers now at Ol' Massa Pete Macias' Heigh Ho Club, entertained Audrey and Severin, from the Earle, a night or two ago. Our ear-to-the-ground department reported that most of the conversation was so definitely shop talk that unless you had graduated from a school of dancing and knew Latin you were out of luck.

Attractions at Two Gay Spots



D'Andrea and Tonelli are entertaining the after-dark guests at the Club Habana this week, Jimmy Staley (below) has been an attraction at the Dude Ranch for the last few weeks. He's a crooning baritone.

Special for Elections.

The National Capital Republican Club yesterday announced that it had secured special concessions from both the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio railroads for the benefit of Pennsylvania and New Jersey voters now in the District who desire to vote in their State elections November 5.

Joseph F. Hindes Dies at Age of 73

Emerson Drug Firm Head Victim of Pneumonia.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—Joseph F. Hindes, 73, president of the Emerson Drug Co., one of the largest firms of its kind in this country, died today at the University of Maryland Hospital. Hindes had been ill with pneumonia for a week. He was a native of Baltimore.

He was the son of Joseph F. Hindes, who came into prominence during the Civil War when he, while connected with the Federal Treasury, saved from capture a large supply of Government bonds aboard a revenue cutter.

Hindes was an enthusiastic baseball fan, golfer and horseman. He also was interested in fine hunting dogs and on his estate at Relay for many years raised champion setters. His kennels were regarded as among the finest in the United States. He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Edna L. Effinger, of Lancaster, Pa.

Farley Accepts Job Of Mailing Letter

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 29.—One more duty has been added to those of Postmaster General James Farley—that of mailing letters.

Mrs. W. M. Hopking, of Wendover road, met the postal chief at the Navy-Notre Dame football game Saturday. In her pocket was a letter she had forgotten to mail. Perhaps the postal chief would mail it for her, she suggested.

Farley, in a box adjoining one in which Mrs. Hopkins was seated, bowed low.

"It will be a pleasure," he said with a courtly flourish. "I and the United States Postal Service are at your service."

Ship Fire at Sea Under Control

Steamer Exarch, With 45 Aboard, Stops Precautionary Calls.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 29.—Fire aboard the steamer Exarch, outward bound for Mediterranean ports, was believed under control tonight and local agents for the vessel said she probably was proceeding on her course.

Absence of calls for assistance supported the belief the steamer and those aboard her—nine passengers and a crew of 36—were in no danger.

Early in the day the Exarch's master, Capt. B. A. Jacobsen, asked vessels in the vicinity to stand by, but no request for assistance followed and later wireless advices stated the fire was "under temporary control."

The Exarch's position was given as approximately 750 miles east of New York, from which port she sailed Friday.

The fire was said to have broken out in the shelter deck and was believed to have damaged the ship's mechanical steering gear. A wireless message advised that the hand steering gear was being used.

Several vessels were known to be in the vicinity and the steamer Pipestone County, 140 miles distant, offered assistance, but no response was picked up here indicating the offer was accepted.

The Exarch, owned by the American Export Line, is a vessel of 5,830 tons. She is primarily a cargo carrier and has accomodations for only 33 passengers. Among her nine passengers is Philip Ernst, clerk in the United States Legation at Athens, and his wife and child.

Circleville, W. Va., High School Burns

Building and Equipment Lost Valued at $80,000.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Franklin, W. Va., Oct. 29.—The comparatively new high school at Circleville, 13 miles from here, and one of two high schools in Pendleton County, burned this morning. Loss on building and contents was estimated at $80,000.

The fire started when the janitor attempted to stir up a fire in the heating plant, and was due to a burst of either gas or dust in the furnace. The janitor was not injured. Lack of fire-fighting equipment prevented any comprehensive effort to control the blaze. The town is in a section removed from other towns.

Officials said $15,000 insurance was carried. The building, of brick, was valued at $25,000, exclusive of equipment. Recently considerable PWA work had been done on the property. The school provided facilities for 150 students. No arrangement had been made today to take temporary care of the students.

Chorus Director Named.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Miss Grace Oliver, music instructor for Martinsburg public schools, was named at the annual meeting of State Educational Association, in Charleston, to conduct the All-State High School Chorus at the 1936 meeting in Huntington.

Class Officers Chosen.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 29.—Grace Goodhart has been elected president of the senior class of the Leesburg high school. Others elected are Virginia Plaster, vice president; Maurice Lowenbach, secretary, and Ralph Crim, treasurer. The following were appointed to the student council: Virginia Plaster, Frank Rafio, Grace Goodhart and Ray Marshall.

Smart Articles Shown at Sale By Local Shop

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SALES are always fun but this one more than usual. In the first place, it's held in a certain little shop that has a personality all its own. It's just one of those places you like to visit, with just dozens of things you like to buy. Sometimes you can't buy them because the prices are just a trifle over the budget mark, but now, during the sale, they are below par.

Take for instance the neckwear. Regular value $1.50 and $2.50. Present price, $1 and $1.85. It isn't mere neckwear. These collar and cuff sets were chosen for Washington women because they have double-barrelled chic.

On gifts (and such a display and array of them), there are discounts from 20 to 40 per cent. Of course, it's a little early to do your Christmas shopping, but after all if you can pick up a cocktail shaker, a vase, a pair of book-ends or an hors d'oeuvres tray for next to nothing why not get the jump on Santa Claus?

Hats, too, have come in for drastic reductions. Values up to $15 have come down to $2.85, $3.85, $5.85 and $8.85. You'll find all head sizes and, of course, dozens of attractive colors and color combinations.

If you've never shopped in this little place for a hat, you have a treat in store! The hats here all have a certain delightful individuality. And then too, there's such a wide range in style, size, etc.

One particularly interesting sale item to be stressed during the next few days is the dusting powder sold with one dram of perfume for only $1. The usual price, $1.75.

Keep in mind that all scarfs, handbags, costume jewelry, and hosiery, too, are selling at great reductions.

Table of Gift Suggestions.

WHEN THE PROBLEM arises what to select for a gift then hie yourself to an F street store and see the table of McClelland Barclay's gift suggestions. Not one there that doesn't excel in originality. Not one there you won't want to keep!

Especially attractive is the gold water lily with a midget gold and green frog squatting in the chalice. And then there are the two white and tan Scottie book ends sure to please any devotee of dogdom. With more than its share of elegance is the desk set in sea-horse design. There are many things, and each one exquisitely designed by Mr. Barclay and bearing his signature.

Shop Opens Shoe Section.

HEAR YE! Hear ye! There's a certain small store on G street that is always springing surprises. This time it's a new shoe section. And no shoe in the shop costs more than $1.99! There are suedes and kids, shoes in many novelty designs, as well as plain, workaday shoes. Of interest to those seeking extra special comfort shoes are those known as the "comfort" brand. These have combination lasts and "comfort" heels to make walking and long hours of standing no strain on the feet.

Particularly fascinating are the evening slippers. One pair with taille back and satin front boasts small criss-cross straps over the toes set quite close together to prevent those awkward looking and uncomfortable gaps. These come in white, black, silver and gold, although they may be dyed any shade you like.

Siamese Cats Described As 'Doggy' Pets by Owner

MRS. WALTER N. POLAKOV

Mrs. Polakor, Wife of Economist, Declares They Have Many Canine Characteristics, Even the Growl and Fighting Ability.

AS FITTINGLY call a nightingale a common sparrow, as a Siamese just plain "cat"!

For the "personality" of the Siamese, according to a Washington cat fancier, who owns a family of the exotic animals, exhibits small relationship to alley cat characteristics.

"These Siamese rascals are more like dogs than cats," Mrs. Walter N. Polakov, 2129 Florida avenue, wife of the widely known economist and author of "The Power Age," insists.

Growls When Reprimanded.

"I often take them walking with me," she said. "They meow happily when they see the leash and stroll majestically down the street at my side."

To prove the "dogginess" of her pets, Mrs. Polakov showed sleek brown Pradjad Hipok, male Siamese, a rubber whip with which she reprimands it. The animal slunk off the couch, put its tail between its legs and growled.

Apologetically she petted the animal, and it lifted its paw and licked her hand!

"They never scratch either," Mrs. Polakov said, "and love to roll over for some petting."

Snark, lighter and more delicate than her mate, left the kittens and stretched out on the rug for a caress. The kittens, cream colored things with violet eyes, brown-tipped tails and tan paws, and noses stood by looking a bit jealous.

Mrs. Polakov's cats are globe trotters.

"Pradjad has motored all over the United States with my husband and myself," she said. "He sits in front with his paws on the windshield ledge and watches houses and telegraph poles fly by. And Snark has visited Russia and every European country."

A snapshot taken on board boat, shows Snark snuggling contentedly on a deck chair with its mistress.

"I can't see any difference between these animals and a Pekingese or any other small breed of canine animal," she continued. "Like dogs, they always wait at the door for my homecoming, and when I enter scamper joyously about the room."

And she insisted that these cats are one-man animals.

"They do not attach themselves to a place, but to a person," she said. "I am certain they'd be very miserable with any other master or mistress."

Battle Dogs to Finish.

When it comes to the traditional dog and cat battle these cats don't spit, spread claws, and then run for the nearest tree. Using tooth and paw, they attack any dog that wants a fight and battle to a finish.

"I've converted about four cat-haters into cat-lovers through these animals of mine," she remarked. "After two or three visits to my home my friends lost all antipathy to the cat family and adopted Siamese kittens of their own."

Mrs. Polakov has owned dogs, too, and likes them. She contends, however, that it is cruel to keep dogs in a city apartment. The Siamese breed solved her pet problem, she said, for the animals are happy in the city.

The neighbors of the Polakov family never complain about them either, for although the Siamese pussies have adopted the growl, they haven't yet stolen the bark from their canine cousins, Mrs. Polakov said.

Home Routine Fails If Carried To an Extreme

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. SMITH had what she considered an orderly mind. She liked things to be in place, events to follow in reasonable sequence, and routine to be exact and invariable. She had four children and inadequate service, however, and so had to organize life to run by the clock.

She made out a schedule like a school program and hung it on the wall of the dining room, and, according to this, she made the entire family, husband and all, regulate their lives.

It worked all too well for some time, and the household ran on greased wheels. Everyone came to breakfast at a fixed hour, went to school, music and dancing class or business as the schedule demanded. Certain times were set aside for reading, housekeeping, recreation; and in order of age, every one, even father and mother, went to bed. The neighbors could tell the hour by watching the lights of the house go out at night.

But after a while the children grew restive. Their friends had more freedom, and, consequently, more variety in their lives. They could make an unexpected visit to the movies, and the world was not put out of gear if they were late to a meal. Their parents, too, were more spontaneous and human and apt to come to breakfast late once in a while, or have it in bed as the result of a gay party the night before.

The Smiths had come to regard the schedule as an end in itself; indeed it was a sacred ritual which controlled their lives. No doubt it made for efficiency, but it also tended to shut them off from the world as completely as if they lived in an institution.

Routine has its value, but carried to an extreme it may interfere with living quite as much as irregularity.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHEN THE PHONE is ringing and the littlest one is howling and the biscuits are burning—all at the same time—a lady with a house feels that she has quite enough on her hands without having to think about interior decoration of all things. But there always comes a lull when planning new curtains and adding a few new pieces of furniture is nearly as nice as a party compared to the more hectic duties of a busy household.

S. B. N. WRITES: My job of running a robust family of five on a very much less than robust income automatically demands that I be a jack of all trades . . . and master of several! Now then—my problem is to buy some new upholstered chairs and I can't afford to make a mistake. Will you suggest types and colors—and how can I be sure that I am getting a reliable quality that will stand the hard wear my family gives everything we have. Our rug is taupe and so is the sofa—which I hate but they're so practical and besides I can't change them now. The walls are light green and I have some darker green draperies. Needless to say the room isn't very peppy and I'd like to make it more so if you can think of a way that would still be durable.

* * * *

ANSWER: Frieze is just about the hardest wearing upholstery material you can get, so I think I'd advise it for one of the new chairs . . . but in a pretty color . . . coral, bittersweet or a deep faded raspberry shade. Then for the other chair, why don't you select a flat weave figured mohair in nice colors that harmonize with the various shades you already have. About the best insurance is to deal with a reliable store where you can take their word for the quality.

32-Year-Old Victim of Heartbreak and Disillusion Asks Advice on How to Find Job on Shipboard, in Order to Get Away From It All.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am in need of advice and help. Shattered dreams and the heartbreak they bring make it necessary for me to go out into the world and make my own way. I am 32 years old and have never been trained to work. What a crime! Should I ever have a daughter, she will be taught how to be economically self-sufficient and independent, no matter how slight the need for such preperation may seem to be.

I am well educated, traveled, have a definite personality, a genuine love of life and of people and a rather unusual amount of understanding of human beings. No doubt most persons possess similar characteristics. I can sew beautifully, but have thought most of getting a position on a ship, in one of the shops or possibly the library. Such work would be a godsend, as I could be away for days and could be saving money at the same time. I will work hard and faithfully and for little compensation until such time as I deserve more.

* * * *

How should I go about getting such a job? I must turn to you because of my total ignorance of business methods. Here I am, just one more creature learning that at one time or another all of us must seek help in order to find our way across blind, waste spaces in life.

Sincerely, R. F. M.

Don't Run From Life.

DEAR R. F. M.: In order to secure a position on shipboard, one would necessarily have to bring one's application for such work to the attention of the proper officials of the shipping company one had in mind. There is at least one such company in Baltimore, the Merchants & Miners' Transportation Co., at 112 South Gay street, and a great many more such companies in New York City. From among the latter I will cite the following, chosen at random: Clyde-Mallory Line, pier 34, N. R.; Cunard-White Star, Ltd., 25 Broadway; French Line, 19 State street; Grace Lines, 10 Hanover square, and Hamburg-American Line, North German Lloyd, 57 Broadway.

* * * *

I presume each company has a personnel division and a personnel director, and you might address written application to the latter official, specifying the type of employment on shipboard for which you believe yourself best qualified, and supplying your most imposing references as to character, training and general background. A personal call might result in a speedier and more satisfactory response, if you possess pleasing personality, good appearance and that ability to command the interested attention of others which is known in the vernacular as "the ability to sell oneself."

* * * *

Perhaps it is for the best that "shattered dreams and the heartbreak they bring" (to quote your somewhat rhetorical and slightly emotional statement of the situation) are compelling you at the age of 32 to come down out of your ivory tower and make a practicable adjustment to the world of reality. The workaday world, after all, is not so strange and hostile a place as you may now believe. As one writer has aptly said, "It is only a jungle maxim which holds that that which is strange is hostile."

* * * *

The modern woman has only reached the unfolding stage of her fullest blossoming, of mind and character and talents and personality, at 30 and her best most creative years still lie ahead. If it is indeed true, as you say, that you are well educated, traveled, possess a definite personality and a genuine love of life and persons, you not only have nothing to fear from life, but a great deal to offer which the world is always eagerly looking for.

* * * *

Your expressed preference for a position on shipboard, which would take you away for days, may be an involuntary confession of a desire to escape from reality. If so, it is a cowardly impulse which you may be wise to conquer. No problem is ever solved by one's running away from unresolved issues or from the circumstances which created them. One gains in maturity and in courage by facing all phantoms of fear until they dissolve into nothingness.

British Women Praised For Work in Politics

Excel Americans, Asserts Mrs. Butler, Back After 8 Years.

By Dudley Harmon.

AMERICAN women, for all their vaunted power, are lagging English women in political influence. Such is the outstanding impression that Mrs. Hugh Butler, wife of the former United States trade commissioner in England, has brought back with her after eight years' residence in London.

English women have had complete franchise only since 1928. Yet both directly and indirectly, according to Mrs. Butler, they are a powerful political force in England.

"As a political hostess the English woman exerts her greatest indirect influence on the affairs of her country," Mrs. Butler said. "For her, presiding at parties is a fine art, and she has been trained since childhood to meet people graciously.

Aids Husband's Career.

"She knows how to draw out her guests on the subjects which most interest them, and is herself possessed of sufficient knowledge of current affairs intelligently to join in the conservation. By knowing whom to invite, and how to make them feel at home, she is of invaluable service in furthering her husband's career. In fact, it is the ambition of most young girls in this country to marry a man in public life, as public service is far more highly esteemed in England than in the United States.

"Furthermore, the Englishman in political life bears this in mind when he looks around for a wife. Not only must she be the type who will make a good mother and homemaker, but she must be able to preside graciously at the tea table as well."

The American woman who reads this is apt to sigh and say, "Well, I could entertain brilliantly if I had as many servants as they do in England." While Mrs. Butler contributes their success as hostesses largely to the fact that they do have more servants than the average American woman, she says that they do without many modern conveniences in order to have the domestic help that will allow them leisure for entertaining.

Bachrach Photo.

says the political hostess plays an important part in British politics.

They would rather have a cook and nursemaid, for example, she says, than an automobile and the latest model in iceboxes. Also, they pay less attention to clothes. In fact, Mrs. Butler reports it is not considered good taste in England even to discuss clothes, and the dress bill of the average American would cause an English woman to hold up her hands in horror.

The English woman also goes in for direct action in politics, according to Mrs. Butler.

"There are almost three times as many women in the House of Commons as in our Congress," she said. "And England had a woman cabinet minister several years before we did. I refer to Margaret Bondfield, minister of health under the Labor government.

"Furthermore, English women in politics are unusually fine speakers. No child is allowed to graduate from secondary school until he or she has mastered the art of making a speech. Never under any circumstances do they read from a manuscript, which spoils so many political addresses in this country, and the effect is infinitely more moving and inspiring.

Examples Are Cited.

"So often the wife of the American man in public life hides her personality behind that of her husband, professing to know little of his work. Not so in England. Mrs. Baldwin, wife of the prime minister, is invariably found sitting on the platform when her husband speaks, and when called upon herself is capable of a good address. Mrs. Snowden, wife of Philip Snowden, one time chancellor of the exchequer, is not only one of London's most sought after hostesses, but a noted speaker in her own right."

Roquefort Adds Decided Flavor To Vegetables

Dash Put in White Sauce Gives Effective Touch to Spinach.

By Dorothea Duncan.

ROQUEFORT cheese added in discreet amounts to a mild flavored sauce that is to accompany a rather characterless vegetable will add flavor to the whole dish.

The vegetable dinner suggested for tonight will be much more effective if the eggs nested in chopped spinach are covered with a Roquefort sauce rather than a mild unflavored white sauce.

You will find after reading the following recipe for the above mentioned dish that a sauce with a distinctive flavor can be prepared quite as easily as one which has no flavor, and that the added ingredient (the Roquefort in this case) is of such a small amount as to make little difference in the expense of the dish.

Cheese Poached Eggs Nested In Spinach.

Chopped seasoned spinach
White sauce
Poached eggs
Roquefort cheese

To each pint (2 cups) of white sauce add 4 ounces of crumbled Roquefort cheese. Put poached eggs on a bed of spinach. Pour over eggs a 2-ounce ladleful of white sauce. Add a dash of paprika on the top.

Radium Brings Relief in Most Rhinitis Cases

Nasal Irrigations Advised Although They Afford No Assurance of Cure.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

TO a very large extent we compel the nasal mucous membrane to supply moisture to the air that we breathe. If we happen to be filling the lungs with dry air the mucous membranes of the air passages will endeavor to add water before the air reaches the delicate lung tissue.

Inasmuch as dry air will take up moisture from every available source the nasal mucous membrane suffers and, because of drying, tiny breaks often appear in the external cell layers. Through these gateways infection may gain entrance, find lodgment and grow. The resulting inflammation is sometimes called rhinitis or catarrh—the term indicating a chronic pus discharge from the nose.

Difficult To Remedy.

A type of nasal infection that is extremely obnoxious and difficult to remedy is known as ozena or atrophic rhinitis. This condition is accompanied by destruction and hardening of the nasal mucous membranes and of the underlying bone. The disease is characterized by an extremely foul smelling discharge which tends to dry into crusts. These in turn sometimes prevent the passage of air. The infection usually begins during early childhood or youth and may continue for many years. Unfortunately for the comfort of the patient's friends, the disease deadens and finally destroys the sense of smell, hence the victim is unaware of the nauseating odor that may be detected by others when in his vicinity.

On examination the mucous membranes will show marked atrophy with a deposit of a considerable amount of scar tissue. The extremely offensive odor is probably due to the presence of bacteria that decompose protein, resulting in the production of certain fetid digestive products.

Radium Affords Relief.

Within recent years, however, in the experience of Hubert and Robinson, the employment of radium has afforded relief in a fairly high percentage of cases. Their work has been repeated by other investigators who have reported success with a number of patients. The most recent study is that of R. P. Wright, who details the experience of 21 patients subjected to radium. He found that two treatments on the average would relieve the condition. In only two cases was a third or fourth application necessary. The follow-up treatment consisted in washing out the nasal passages once or twice daily with Seller's solution.

Byrd Lauds Depression Strides in Va.

Cites Tax Cuts, Gains in Employment, Debt Reductions.

Predicts Era of Rapid Industrial Progress for State.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 29.—Senator Harry F. Byrd tonight said the time has again come "for Virginia to resume a remarkable State development temporarily arrested by the world depression."

"Already new industries are examining our advantages," the Senator said in an address before the Charlottesville-Albemarle Chamber of Commerce in which he made a plea for all citizens to "keep Virginia sound."

"Let us continue to keep our budget in balance and to live within our income and to make progress by efficiency and simplification of governmental machinery," he continued. "It is something worth while to attract the attention of the Nation as an oasis of sound management in an ocean of debt and rising taxes.

Lauds Fiscal Policy.

"Let other States go the way they prefer, but we in Virginia can continue the less spectacular paths of industry and thrift; paying as we go and then pay just as little in taxes as necessary for our essential functions of government administered by those in authority with a strict accountability for business efficiency to give the people of Virginia a dollar of value for every dollar spent."

Praising the fiscal policy of the Virginia government as "an inspiring achievement in governmental management which promises to bring our State a new era of progress and industrial development when America again resumes its prosperity stride," Senator Byrd said there is a competition between States just as keen as between rival business enterprises. He predicted an influx of new citizens and new industries with an increase in taxable values.

Byrd said Virginia had come through the depression with a net decrease in States taxes, with a budget that will be balanced in 1936, with a cash reduction of almost $2,000,000 in bonded indebtedness, and without impairment of necessary functions of government.

Cites Achievements.

At the same time, he declared, Virginia has contributed as much or more than any Southern State to the relief of the unemployed, and has received less than other States of equal population; has increased appropriations to public schools by $1,678,948, as compared with the 1928-39 period; has maintained appropriations for health, has given $633,484 more for the care of unfortunates in hospitals and welfare institutions, and has kept its road program going forward on a satisfactory basis.

"Never before has Government been of such importance to the average citizen as now. In 1913 all the governments of the United States—local, State and national—collected from the American citizen 8 per cent of the total gross income of the Nation in the form of taxes. At present, the same governments are spending 40 per cent of our gross income, in increase of 500 per cent in 20 years. I do not believe we can long survive and maintain our standards of living if 40 cents out of every dollar of national income is taken as a tribute to the tax spenders."

Has Reduced Taxes.

The Senator said the Library of Congress had just issued a pamphlet stating that Virginia is the only State not to increase taxes during the depression.

"In fact, since the depression began, there has been a net reduction in State taxation," he said.

The Senator quoted statistics at length, asserting that the tax rate on land and tangible personal property had been reduced in Virginia since 1936 from an average of $2.33 per $100 of assessed value to an average of $1.65 in the counties, which translated into dollars means a saving of $6,337,000 to taxpayers. In the cities he said a saving of $2,241,000 had been made.

Industrial employement has reached normal in Virginia, he said, adding that Virginia was alone among the States in this respect.

Dr. Edwards Addresses Harrisonburg Meeting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 29.—Money spent for sports over the Nation could well be used by the church for its support and activities, speakers declared today at the annual fall meeting of the Virginia Classis of the Reformed Church.

Dr. Boyd Edwards, president of Mercersburg Academy, spoke at the Layman's League banquet last night. He insisted that religion is more than a ceermony, a statement, a sentiment, or a service, but is "a war in man himself, fought against the fool."

E. L. Harris, of Middlebrook, Augusta County, was elected president of the Laymen's League; Hiram C. Arey, Bridgewater, was chosen vice president; John Robert Wilkins, Edinburg, secretary, and Robert Dechert, Winchester, treasurer.

Nice Raps Girls' Influencing Of Decisions in Traffic Court

Governor Tells Judges to Rule Regardless of Spectators' Ideas.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—It's all right for high school girls to be spectators at traffic court cases, Gov. Harry W. Nice said today, but when they begin influencing the decision of magistrates, that's another thing.

Accordingly the Governor issued an order for the magistrates to reach their own decisions.

The girls, studying civics, have visited the traffic courts frequently in recent weeks. Several magistrates have allowed them to take a poll among themselves as to the guilt or innocence of the parties concerned.

The chief executive was aroused to action by reports an informal jury of girls from Western High School had influenced Magistrate George Eckhardt, jr., to change a verdict of guilty to one of acquittal.

"That is not good practice," said the Governor. "I will ask the magistrates not to continue it. If it is not stopped, I will take action to stop it.

"These visits may give the students an insight into the practical workings of the courts. They may make any decisions they wish among themselves, but these must not influence the decisions of the magistrates."

Magistrate Eckhardt denied, however, the girls had influenced his decision in the case of Frank Duncan, whose automobile struck and injured Mrs. Anna Burns.

He at first found Duncan guilty and fined him $5, then changed his decision after the girls had indicated they thought Duncan should be acquitted.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 29.—Funeral services for Mrs. Fannie A. Toms, 73, widow of John Toms, for years a prominent fruit grower of the southern end of Albemarle, were conducted yesterday at her home near Covesville, by the Rev. L. H. Weston, of the Methodist Church.

Seven children survive: H. L. Toms, of Batesville; J. B. Toms, B. T. Toms, Ashby Toms, of Covesville; Mrs. C. J. Mawyer, of North Garden; Mrs. Robert Kennedy, of Covesville, and Mrs. T. Wesley Kent, of Greenfield.

There are 17 grandchildren.

George E. Klencke.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Piedmont, W. Va., Oct. 29.—George E. Klencke, 82, was buried in Philos Cemetery, Westernport, this afternoon with services conducted by the Rev. Charles P. Scheiner, pastor of Mount Calvary Lutheran Church. He was the oldest native-born resident.

Klencke was in the contracting and building business for many years and was a director in the former Davis National Bank. He was elected to the Piedmont city council, but refused to qualify. He served several terms as county commissioner of Mineral County.

Surviving children are Frederick Klencke, Piedmont; Mrs. Vesta Harmon, Philadelphia; Mrs. John E. Keller, Westernport, and Mrs. May Baldwin, at home.

Mrs. Annie R. Smouse.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 29.—Mrs. Annie R. Smouse, 79, formerly of this city, widow of Thomas F. Smouse, lumber operator and former city councilman, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ellis W. VanHorn, New Enterprise, Pa. She is also survived, by a son, Thomas Ralph Smouse, in business in Los Angeles.

Funeral services will be held here tomorrow. The body will be placed in Rose Hill Mausoleum.

Mrs. Ella F. Creamer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shenandoah Junction, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Funeral services will be conducted at the home here tomorrow, with interment following in Martinsburg, W. Va., for Mrs. Ella F. Creamer, 80, a native of Martinsburg, and one of this county's older residents. She died at her home here of pneumonia after a two-day illness.

Voters in Maryland Warned to Qualify

New residents of Maryland who wish to vote in the presidential elections next year must declare by next Monday their intentions of becoming citizens of Maryland.

The Maryland election law requires that any person moving into Maryland from another State must go before the clerk of the circuit court for his county and declare that he intends to become a citizen of Maryland. It is not necessary to declare party affiliation.

Persons who have declared their intentions then will register on the days of registration, to be announced later. Persons attaining majority while residing in Maryland do not have to declare their intentions.

'Bookie Law' In Appeal Test At Annapolis

Constitutionality at Issue; Statute Forbids Bets on Horse Races.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 29.—The fight over race track betting in Washington County reached the Court of Appeals today when the constitutionality of the "bookie law," passed by the last Legislature, was submitted to the court.

The law, passed as an amendment to an existing law, was designed to break up the making and taking of bets in the county on horse races.

The two questions which the court was asked to decide are:

"Was chapter 390 of the acts of the General Assembly of Maryland passed in conformity with the provisions of section 29, article 3, of the constitution of Maryland?

"Does this act itself prohibit the making or taking of bets in Washington County on the result of horse races?"

The law was first questioned in the Washington County Circuit Court when Harry D. Miggins sought an injunction to restrain Sheriff Max Mallot and State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram, of Washington County, from enforcing the law. The court dismissed the petition and Miggins appealed.

Miggins, in his original complaint, declared that he had been conducting an establishment for taking bets on horse races, and that his business had been run in a proper and legal manner and that no license or permit was required to operate. He asserted that the officials had threatened him with arrest.

Miggins was represented today by Calvert K. Hartle and Charles Z. Heskett. Ingram and Hiliary W. Gans, deputy attorney general, appeared for the appellees.

WPA Expects 2,810 on Jobs In Maryland

Dryden Sets Friday as Deadline to Place That Number.

New Projects to Begin; 1,200 Are Working at Present.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—Francis H. Dryden, State works progress administrator, said today that he expects that 2,810 men will have been called to WPA projects in Maryland counties by Friday.

Last Friday, Dryden said, slightly more than 1,200 men were at work on projects in the counties. About half of these were on jobs established by the Federal Government and the rest were working on locally sponsored projects.

Dryden said this week's increase will be practically all on the projects set up by cities and counties.

Yesterday, he said, 234 men were requisitioned for work on 14 projects in ten counties. These were Anne Arundel, Allegany, Dorchester, Worcester, Wicomico, Caroline, Kent, Talbot, Queen Anne and Frederick.

No projects were scheduled to start today, but 34 jobs, giving work to 1,256 men will be begun tomorrow and Thursday. Among these are jobs in Prince Georges, Montgomery, Washington and Somerset counties.

Four Jobs to Open.

Four more jobs are scheduled to start Friday, two in Washington and two in Anne Arundel County. WPA heads have asked for 139 men for these projects.

While Dryden was announcing his schedule for the remainder of the week, the WPA strike situation in Western Maryland remained unchanged. Dryden announced he was not closing projects which the workers left Monday and said they would find jobs awaiting them whenever they went back to work. Although he has the power to transfer the funds allotted these jobs to other construction, he said he would not do this.

The attitude of relief workers toward continuing direct relief payments to the strikers was somewhat clarified by developments during the day. Federal authorities said that this matter was up to Dryden and Harry Greenstein, State relief administrator.

No Action Planned.

Dryden said he would not ask they be taken off direct relief rolls. Greenstein has said he will not take any action until the matter is brought to his attention officially. Pending this, the relief payments apparently will continue as long as Federal funds are available.

Further information from Somerset County during the day indicated first reports that relief workers were refusing private jobs were exaggerated. The original story was that 100 men had refused jobs cutting wood because the pay was too low. Reports later said only 20 men had refused the jobs and none of them was on relief. All of them were unemployed, however, and were registered with the National Re-employment Service.

Hurt in Scaffold Fall.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 29.—C. H. Higgins, Thomas, W. Va., employed on the Tygarts River dam construction, near Grafton, received broken ankles in the collapse of a scaffold. He is in Grafton City Hospital. He is a brother of Alonzo B. Higgins, custodian of the Cumberland Elks Club, who is recovering from a broken collar bone, received recently in an automobile accident.

Warden Lax In Discipline, Report Holds

Nice Releases Findings, Recommendations of Survey Group.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 29.—The State survey commission, in a report made public today by Gov. Harry W. Nice, declared that the House of Correction is being well conducted, but Warden J. Leroy Wright "has been too lax in discipline, too lenient in punishment."

Dr. Wright's resignation, effective November 1, was accepted by the board of welfare several weeks ago. The commission's report on the House of Correction, at Jessups, is the second it had made.

Recommendations Listed.

Five recommendations for bettering conditions at the institution were included in the commission's report. They were:

That stricter discipline be enforced.

That four vacant workships be converted into dormitories with the use of prison labor.

That a study be made of the advisability of buying more farm land near the establishment.

That the number of guards be increased by at least eight.

The commission said that the food at the institution was excellent. However, the members said, the crowding which forces the confinement of two persons in a cell built for one is "cruel and unusual punishment."

Outbreak Feared.

Conversion of the workshops not only will provide work for the prisoners, but correct the crowded situation, the report said.

The report criticized the disarming of guards, which it said had been done by Harold J. Donnell, superintendent of prisons. Formerly all guards, numbering about 50, were armed with revolvers, the commission said. Now only five are armed.

"It can never be anticipated when an outbreak may occur," the report said. "It would be much safer to have guns and not need them than to need them and not have them."

Nice Seeks U. S. Funds.

The report also stated that Dr. Wright once told the prisoners that if they didn't want to work they didn't have to. On another occasion, the report said, a prisoner escaped. When he was recaptured, he was placed in solitary confinement, but released by Dr. Wright after a few hours.

Increase of the tillable land at the institution not only would provide more work for the prisoners, but, the produce could be canned for use at other State institutions. More farm work would mean more guards, the report said, but more are needed anyway, as the present number is "inadequate."

In releasing the report, Gov. Nice said the recommendations on converting the workshops and clearing the scrub land were particularly good ones.

He also said that the increase in the prison population suggested the advisability of building a new prison on the foundations already laid at the State penal farm in Roxbury. This could be done at a cost of $1,750,000, he said, and he has already initiated a movement to secure this sum from the Federal Government.

'Vindication' Lectures Follow Failure to Break Father's Will

By the Associated Press.

Lebanon, Va., Oct. 29.—Mrs. Mary Stuart Harmon, who recently lost a court contest to break the will of her father, the late Gov. H. C. Stuart of Virginia, today announced she will conduct a public speaking campaign of "vindication" in southwest Virginia.

Her first public address was delivered at Pocahontas, in Tazewell County, last Saturday, Mrs. Harmon said, adding that others will be made this week at points adjacent to Lebanon.

Mrs. Harmon said she had received more than a dozen letters since voicing a recent appeal for funds, but that only one cash donation to help her prosecute and appeal in the litigation to set aside Gov. Stuart's will had been made.

"On his deathbed," Mrs. Harmon said of her father, "after he was advised that he could not recover, he called me to his side and engaged in silent prayer, at the close of which he looked at me and clearly said, 'My little girl, she never had a chance.' This statement puzzled me and I asked bystanders what he meant."

"After his death, when his will was published, I understood what he meant. I learned that false representations had induced him to practically disinherit me, even though his estate was appraised at close to a million dollars."

17-Year-Old Is Held In Slaying of Boy, 12

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Oct. 29.—Raymond Gardner, 17, of the Bays Mountain section, approximately 20 miles from Bristol, was in jail at Kingsport today, charged with the fatal shooting Sunday of Carl Compton, 12. The boy was killed when he ran between Gardner and Ray Compton, an older brother.

Gardner allegedly went to the home of Bill Wheetzel, obtained a shotgun, and took aim at Ray Compton, with whom he had quarreled.

'No Complaints On Gambling,' Bowie Declares

Allegation of School Paper All He Has Heard of It, Prosecutor Says.

By the Associated Press.

Upper Marlboro, Md., Oct. 29.—If professional gamblers are operating at College Park, site of the University of Maryland, State's Attorney Alan Bowie, of Prince Georges County, said today, he has received no complaints of it.

Criticizing county officials for the condition, the Diamondback, student newspaper of the university, said editorially that agents of a notorious Prince Georges gambling house had invaded College Park.

"No one from the university or anywhere else has made any complaints to me," Bowie said. "I just heard there was an article on it, but I haven't seen it."

Richard Hunt, editor of the college paper, wrote the editorial. He said he personally had investigated the matter. The editorial said, in part:

"Not only has this organism of vice embraced Prince Georges County in its entirety, but in octopus-like fashion has spread one of its filthy arms to the very gates of the university. Within the narrow confines of College Park is situated an agency at which bets may be placed on horses running miles away."

Virginia Optometrists Name Cross President

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 29 (AP).—Members of the Virginia Optometric Association last night elected Dr. H. E. Cross, of Alexandria, as president and voted to hold their 1936 meeting in Richmond.

Other officers elected at the annual banquet were Dr. I. J. Mercer, of Richmond, vice president, and Dr. F. D. Jackson, of Norfolk, secretary-treasurer. The latter was re-elected.

Nelson County Election Races Draw Interest

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 29.—Voters of Nelson County are exhibiting greater that usual interest in the general election of November 5.

Dr. J. Belmore Woodson, a member of the State Senate representing Nelson and Amherst Counties for 16 years, is opposed by John Ryland Coleman, of Greenfield. Coleman served in the House of Delegates from Nelson a number of years but was defeated two years ago for the Democratic nomination by J. Tinsley Coleman, who is unopposed this year.

C. W. Embrey, clerk of the circuit court for 16 years, is opposed by R. Kent Loving, former cashier of the First National Bank at Lovingston. Both are Democrats.

M. W. Coleman, supervisor from Rockfish for 37 years, is a candidate for re-election. He has two opponents: E. S. Fox, of Afton, and H. M. Dodd, of Nellys Ford.

Robert Whitehead, appointed Commonwealth's attorney by the court in 1933, to succeed his father, the late Stuart H. Whitehead, is a candidate for that office without opposition.

S. E. Saunders, treasurer, is unopposed for re-election.

K. M. Baker, who has been sheriff 16 years, is an unopposed candidate for re-election, as is W. J. Hill, commissioner of revenue for 12 years.

Sunday Movies Fought.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 29.—Official boards and pastors of churches launched a drive here Sunday to defeat the Sunday movie referendum, which will be voted upon at the general election November 5. If the referendum is defeated a period of five years must lapse before such an issue can come before the voters again.

Mob Feared, Trout Taken To New Jail

Hundreds Jam Church for Funeral Services of Victim.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 29.—The whereabouts of Wilbur F. Trout, attorney, accused of the murder of Harvey (Slick) Saffell following a card game Saturday night, was kept secret last night by police, who feared mob violence.

Trout was moved to the Shenandoah County Jail at Woodstock shortly after he gave himself up after the shooting. At the time he was in a barber shop across from his office. Members of a crowd outside, attracted by the commotion, were reported to have made threats to "get" Trout.

The accused man was taken from Woodstock yesterday morning when police learned of further threats against him. Today officials said Trout had been moved secretly "to a stronger jail for the interest of public welfare.

There were only two witnesses to the shooting—Clarence Darr and William Smedley, the latter a brother-in-law of the victim. Following a statement made by them, John H. Dowling, Commonwealth's attorney, issued a warrant charging Trout with first degree murder.

Nine others who were participants in the poker game, left the scene when Trout and Saffell engaged in an altercation over a small bet. The shooting occurred in the corridor outside Trout's office, about 11:15 p. m.

This afternoon hundreds of persons jammed the Presbyterian Church to attend Saffell's funeral services. Saffell was an umpire for many years in the Valley Baseball League and managed the Front Royal All-Stars part of last season. Surviving are the widow and six children.

Collateral in Lieu Of Fine Is Banned

Summonses for Motorists Ordered by Nice.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 29. Acceptance of collateral from violators of State laws in lieu of fines was ordered discontinued in a letter received by State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram from Gov. Harry W. Nice.

For years, persons violating State laws, especially traffic cases, have been permitted to deposit collateral for a hearing later. Gov. Nice pointed out that such action is illegal. It also has been customary for State police to bring some violators to police sub-stations and permit them to put up collateral. This was for the accommodation of tourists. This too was ordered stopped.

Under the new order, Maryland motorists who violate the law must be given a summons, while out-of-State motorists will be detained at police headquarters unless a magistrate sees fit to fix collateral or the accused may demand an immediate trial.

That Old, Hokum Bucket Still Hangs in the Well in the Newest "Way Down East"!

Sound Version Of Noted Play Is Best of All

By Nelson B. Bell.

Expanded in every department, but still retaining those homely and honest virtues that have caused it to be known, along with "The Old Homestead," "Shore Acres" and perhaps one or two other perennial favorites, as one of the "great American dramas," "Way Down East" recurs as a nostalgic experience to the veteran theatergoer.

This was demonstrated yesterday afternoon when the new Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the old Lottie Blair Parker stage play was previewed by the local drama desks, preliminary to its week's engagement on the screen at Loew's Fox Theater, beginning Friday.

The opening sequences of the play, on the "down East" farm that forms the locale of practically all of the drama's action, provide a particularly faithful picture of life on any prosperous and well-ordered farm—if there are any such in these days of plowing under brood sows and slaughtering corn.

The rich, rolling fields, the well-fed stock, the comfortable homestead and the savory provender sizzling, smoking and steaming on the ample top and in the capacious ovens of a huge wood-burning cookstove bring back priceless memories to some of us corn-fed Hoosiers, even if this particular farm is on the eastern rim of the continent!

Good, Old Hokum!

And it is still the old hokum bucket that hangs in the well in "Way Down East." It is the trysting place of diffident young lovers, the beginning of much of the trouble that leads on to the banishment of the gal into the raging blizzard and out onto the treacherous ice just as that ol' dabbil ribber begins to crack up.

And how that river does crack up, once it sets its frosty mind to it! Eliza crossing the ice never was one-two-three with this demonstration of the quickest spring thaw on record.

Hokum, yes. But, as has been pointed out here times practically without number, "hokum" is merely a convenient name in the patois of show business for those comic, sentimental and melodramatic devices audiences have been proved to like best and enjoy most.

That is the sort of "human interest" with which "Way Down East" is stuffed almost to the bursting point. Any audience will love it!

As a matter of fact, audiences always have loved "Way Down East." When was it ever a flop? As a stage play, it ran virtually forever. When Griffith made it into a picture an even 15 years ago, with Lillian Gish in the role now played by Rochelle Hudson, cash customers traveled miles to view it, and its reissue in 1931, attracted still other thousands.

Is Best One Yet.

Since the present version enjoys the full advantage of every modern trick of staging, lighting and photography, it is proportionately the superior of any other "Way Down East" that has gone before.

The film is not quite so perfectly cast as one might wish, but the defect, paradoxically enough, is that some of the roles are too well played, instead of not well enough. I have in mind now, particularly, that delightful actress, Spring Byington, who is anything but the typical farmer's wife. Then, too, "Slim" Summerville seems to have lost the comic touch since some time before his selection to succeed Herb Williams in the role of Fortune Friendly, when "The Farmer Takes a Wife" was transformed from a stage play into a strip of celluloid. Mr. Summerville was completely unfunny in "The Farmer, etc.," and still is, in "Way Down East." Al Lydell, however, makes up for that discrepancy. He should be visible elsewhere on this page.

Henry Fonda is just as good here as he was in "The Farmer," and that was very good, indeed.

With as good a picture as "Way Down East" on the screen and as superior an orchestra as Guy Lombardo's Royal Canadians on the stage, Loew's Fox should be a difficult place to keep off next week's "must" list of any judicious showshopper.

Since last Friday's opening, Audrey and Severin, popular dance team featured in Al Jolson's "Wonder Bar," when it was converted into a spectacular screen production by the Warners, have been added to the stage bill that already included Barney Rap and His New Englanders, Bernice Claire, Dick and Edith Barstow, dancers, and Bobby May, juggler, at the Earle. And beginning last Saturday, Bert Granoff, tenor, whose voice is one of the major assets of Maestro C. Frederick Clark and his house orchestra, took his place behind the pit microphone to sing "I'm in the Mood for Love" and other prime favorites.

By now, that stage bill should be going great guns. If it was on Sunday night, it was propelled by its own momentum—all of the "big shot" executives of the local Warner staff were at the National having their eyes popped out by the incomparable beauties of Max Reinhardt's picturization of Will Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

"All for One, Etcetera."

The four most famous fighting men in fiction, who so gloriously defended the honor of Queen Anne of France against the intrigues of a wily statesman-prelate, have finally transferred their swashbuckling swordplay from the pages of Dumas to the sound screen in a rousingly realistic spectacle, to be given its initial Washington showing tomorrow.

That is to say that, running true to form, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO- Keith's tomorrow morning will unfurl for Capital scrutiny the RKO-Radio picturization of "The Three Musketeers"—Athos, Porthos and Aramis, with their protege d'Artagnan, the youthful Gascon firebrand.

Despite the fact that theatergoers still living will be able to remember that the late Thomas H. Ince once made "The Three Musketeers" as a three-reel silent film, Fairbanks as a flamboyant feature with dashes of color here and there, but no sound, and the late Flo Ziegfeld as an operetta of the first rank from a "book" by William Anthony McGuire, this is the first time the excitingly romantic tale ever has been given the advantages of modern production methods and the cinema's perfected processes of sound reproduction.

Sound Will Help.

It should be worth something to the picture's claim to realism to be able to sound forth the gurgle of rich Burgundy wine, the clank of rapiers and the thunder of horses hoofs on cobbled streets and hard-baked roads.

The principal characters of the famous story, in the order already named in these dispatches, are impersonated by Walter Abel, Paul Lukas, Moroni Olsen, whose identity seems to have eluded this column, and Onslow Stevens.

The foremost feminine role is played by Margot Grahame, that competent young British actress first seen, if memory serves, as leading woman with Victor McLaglen in "The Informer."

As a special added attraction tomorrow, RKO-Keith's also will present the second group of amateurs to be filmed in a two-reel special subject, in which Maj. Bowes, their discoverer and exploiter, himself appears.

So now you know.

Speaking of classic stories being adapted to the purposes of the cinema, it is of interest that two picturized versions of standard fiction are being presented on the screen of the Little Theater, Ninth street, near F, this week. Each, of course, is a revival.

The current attraction, continuing through tomorrow, is "Les Miserables," from the monumental work of Victor Hugo, with Charles Laughton and Fredric March in the stellar roles. The cast also includes Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Frances Drake and Rochelle Hudson, the ingenuous young woman to be seen soon in "Way Down East," as hereinbefore noted.

Beginning Thursday and continuing through the remaining days of the week, the Little will offer "Treasure Island," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's lusty film edition of Robert Louis Stevenson's thrilling tale of the Spanish Main. Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis S. Stone and Otto Kruger are among the numerous others who are importantly cast.

The Little is a good place to keep your eye on, if you missed the best pictures when they were given their initial Washington releases.

Division Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc.; Lou Brown, advertising and publicity director and their associates are organizing a junket to Baltimore on Saturday . . . To view the Marx Brothers in their new comedy, "A Night at the Opera," that would be . . . Dinner will be served . . . The famished drama desks, who presumably will not have eaten since the preview of "The Passing of the Third Floor Back" last Thursday, have been invited . . . Since the matter has come up—Baltimore, I mean—the guests of honor at the Variety Club smoker in the Monumental City next Tuesday night will be Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland, Mayor Howard Jackson, State's Attorney Herbert O'Connor and Dr. Ben Paul Sandy, chairman of the Maryland Board of Censors . . . That is a world premiere engagement of "A Night at the Opera" in Baltimore, incidentally . . . As a reward for his exceptionally fine work as Midshipman Byam in "Mutiny on the Bounty," scheduled for national release on Friday, November 8, Franchot Tone has been given a new long-term contract by M-G-M . . . The same thing has happened to Una Merkel, for her work in "It's in the Air" and "Broadway Melody of 1936" . . . There are six others of the "Melody" cast similarly rewarded . . . They are Jack Benny, Eleanor Powell, Robert Taylor, Frances Langford, Harry Stockwell and Buddy Ebsen . . . Funny they would break up that brother-and-sister team of Vilma and Buddy Ebsen that our old friend Benny Davis dug up from nowhere . . . But they have . . . Vilma's going to work on another lot . . . The Drama Guild cracks open its new season with George Bernard Shaw's "You Never Can Tell," at Wardman tonight . . . Swell local cast has been assembled . . . Repeats tomorrow night . . . And the Blackfriars Guild will launch its 1935-36 season in St. Paul's Auditorium next Monday and Tuesday evening in "The Whiteheaded Boy" . . . The only member of the cast of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," at the National, to ad lib a line is Joe E. Brown . . . In the rehearsal scene in the wood, it is . . . When he fumbles his lines and says, "I won't play any more" . . . Try to find that line in your Shakespeare text . . . Speaking of such, the Children's Community Theater, Helen I. Burton, director, will present "The Taming of the Shrew" in Roosevelt Auditorium next Tuesday evening at 8:15 . . . These juvenile players improvise their own stage business as they go along . . . And do amazingly well, according to all report . . . I trust the junior Petruchio, under the inspirational spell of the moment, will not become too realistic with that blacksnake whip.

The Eyes Have It Note.

When at first the Warner Brothers insisted they couldn't see Shakespeare on the screen, Max Reinhardt set about selling them the idea of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "Twelfth Night."

Meet Old Hank and His Rheumatiz!

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Sonata recital by Milton Schwartz, violinist, and Betty Baum, pianist, in Pierce Hall, Monday night. Program: Sonata Op. 30, No. 3 (Beethoven), Sonata Op. 21 (Medtner), Sonata Op. 78 (Brahms).

Intelligent and sensitive playing by two young musicians whose sincerity is patent characterized this enjoyable recital. One felt in their performance the presentation of music for its own sake and not for vainglory and the very content of the program indicated their serious intent. Moreover, the arrangement of the compositions in a cumulative order of importance revealed their sound sense of values.

The "little" G major sonata of Beethoven is not one of that master's deeply significant works and its effectiveness suffers somewhat from stylization, as though the composer had a bit too consciously stressed his mannerisms. If it is not packed with things of moment, it nevertheless contains its reward for the listener. The pastoral quality of the opening movement has a piquant freshness and a redolence of field and wood; the minuet sways with a true Viennese grace as though it forecast the reign of the waltz and the vivacious finale has some intriguing modulations.

One feels particularly grateful to the executants for their offering of Nikolai Razlovich Medtner's sonata in B minor, an item seldom found on recital programs. The compositions of this Germanic Russian, uniting uniquely the traits of two peoples, deserve to be better known in this country. Medtner has been rather superficially called the Russian Brahms, a designation decidedly unfair to a writer of pronounced individuality.

If the influence of Brahms is noticeable in his early works, they show also his assimilation of Beethoven and Schumann. But from his Teutonic heritage he evolved speedily a style of poetic distinction and his mature compositions have a profile unmistakably that of Medtner. The B minor sonata, rich in rhythmic variety and melodic invention, is an intensely vital and personal expression, continuously exciting with its ideational originality and its poetic imagination.

The lovely G major sonata of Brahms is a masterpiece of poesy, instinct with the passion for beauty. Embedded in it is the hauntingly beautiful "Regenlied," of which Brahms was so fond a parent that he also used its melody in the last movement of the piano quartet in C minor.

Judges, Clerks Are Named for Vote in Fairfax

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Alexandria 43-F-31.

The electoral board of Fairfax County has completed its work in connection with the general and special election November 5, with the appointment of judges and clerks and the preparation of the ballots.

During the election Tuesday all county officials are to be selected and the voters will decide whether they favor a bond issue of $187,000 for constructing additional classrooms for the public schools.

Only one major county office is being contested, that of Commonwealth's attorney. Judge Paul E. Brown of the county trial justice court, Democrat, opposes Col. Richard R. Farr, Republican, brother of the Democratic incumbent, Wilson M. Farr.

Officials Listed.

In the school bond issue the county school board has maintained a "hands off" policy, by refusing to be drawn into a controversy. The board members stated that they had prepared a building program to provide for the immediate needs of the school system and that a bond issue coupled with a Federal grant of 45 per cent of the total cost was the only means of obtaining funds at present. They stated that they believed the program to be fair and equitable for the whole county, but that they intended to let the voters decide for themselves.

Judges and clerks to officiate in the coming election have been listed by the electoral board as below. The first two names are Democratic judges, the third a Republican judge, the fourth the Democratic clerk and the last the Republican clerk.

2 at Chestertown Get 3 Years in Store Holdup

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chestertown, Md., Oct. 29.—Calvin Carroll, 20, and Harry Reynolds, 24, were sentenced today by Judges Thomas J. Keating and J. Owens Knotts, in Kent County Circuit Court, to three years in the penitentiary for the armed holdup October 9, of the store of Augustus Davis at Gold, Md. Aldy Carroll, 22, brother of Calvin, was freed because of insufficient evidence and Samuel Thorp, 21, was given a suspended sentence on the same charge.

The case of John Ellis, 25, of Chester, Pa., accused of the roadhouse murder of Kelly Terry, is set for tomorrow, with the trial of Wallace Washington, colored, indicted for attempted criminal assault upon a 5-year-old girl, set for Friday.

Culbertson on Bridge

Irregular Leads.

The bridge player who knows all the conventional leads, as every player should, and then clings to them with unvarying consistency, is going to save his partner a lot of headaches. The trouble is, he does the same thing for the declarer, who will appreciate the kindness more than the partner. And while the standpat leader may truthfully claim he makes no mechanical mistakes in his leads, he also will not make a lot of points which might have been his.

To collect the maximum on defense a player must have not only full knowledge of the correct procedure for conventional leads and plays, but an equally correct and indispensable technique of deceptive or irregular leads and plays. These do not have a vague generality but form a definite part of the regulation code of good card play.

A lead or play which is made contrary to the usual convention, with a view to misleading the opponent, is deceptive or irregular. It sometimes is called a bluff or "psychic." The technique of such leads covers the range of situations in which it is less dangerous to fool your partner than to tell the truth to the enemy. You may have a partner who is blissfully unaware of the finer implications of your conventional leads. Skill then consists in not persisting with all the conventional niceties of the play, but in trying to find the best means of keeping him in his state of torpor. In other situations a wide awake partner will "smell the rat" before the opponents and understand your psychic before the declarer does so.

There are good and bad deceptions. The characteristic of bad deceptive leads, like anything stupid, is that there is neither rhyme nor reason to them. If, for instance, holding Q J 10 9, a player leads the jack, he will have fooled the declarer completely, but what good does it do him? He also will fool his partner, and it may easily cost a cold trick if dummy should hold K x x and partner, upon dummy's play of a low card, should play the ace. In still other cases the situation plainly exists in which a deceptive lead can do no real harm to partner, even if he is fooled. This is particularly true when the choice of suits for a lead is reduced to a doubleton headed by a jack or higher honor. With Q 8, if I must lead it, I much prefer the lead of the eight to the "supporting" lead of the queen. It might work out as it did in the following situation:

DUMMY

WEST

EAST

DECLARER
♥ K J 10 6

Against a contract of four spades West was hard put to it for a suitable lead, but finally chose the eight of hearts. His partner took with the ace and, having nothing better to offer, returned a heart. Declarer, thinking the eight had been a singleton, finessed. After gathering in his trick with the queen West led a diamond through dummy's K Q 10 of that suit. His partner showed up with the ace, sent another heart on its way, West ruffed, and the contract was set.

My favorite irregular lead in a low trump from K x, provided declarer is on my right. This lead never has failed me and, in many instances, has saved the day. Declarer never could expect any one to blank the king of trumps with such a lead and invariably leads to the dummy to finesse.

Because of the valuable information given declarer from the mathematical precision of the rule of eleven, every town has its quota of players who never lead the fourth best. Yet you cannot get away from the regulation fourth best lead. However much declarer may learn, the partner learns even more. With an exposed dummy the declarer will get along well even if ignoring the leads completely, but total darkness will descend upon the defenders.

The right solution is to maintain the standard of regulation leads, but to vary them with irregular leads when circumstances warrant. If holding A Q 8 2 against no trump, the irregular lead of the eight is bad because partner will read it as a short suit lead from the top of nothing and abandon a valuable suit. But from A Q 9 6 2, the deceptive lead of the deuce, as though to show only four cards, frequently will bring good results. It is true that there always is a danger that partner, discouraged by an apparent four card suit, may switch to some other suit. As against this there is the advantage that the declarer, assuming wrongly that he is threatened with only a four card suit, may adopt a careless line of play, or may even decide to make an end play by throwing in the leader with his own suit. I once was able to rescue a hopeless game against an expert by leading the deuce from A Q 10 9 6 2 against a three no trump contract. He knew that I disliked the promiscuous use of psychic tactics, and assumed I held something like A Q 6 2. Later in the deal, in trying for an end play, he threw me in with a diamond, expecting to lose only three tricks. He was surprised and aggrieved when I took five instead.

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, Oct. 29.

JAN KIEPURA is making his flicker, and as far as he is concerned, it is his flicker. On the set he tries to be both actor and director. He has his music teacher, a translator, and an English teacher with him. Director Al Hall will give a direction and suddenly a short man will be blasting the words in the lingo Kiepura understands. There are large signs about saying "No Smoking," and Director Hall was asked by Kiepura to stop smoking.

CAGNEY.

Director Hall smokes when he desires.

Kiepura also said he wouldn't sing a duet with his leading lady, the charming Gladys Swarthout. He said if he were forced to, he would sing so loudly that Miss Swarthout wouldn't be heard. Kiepura should know that the volume is controlled by the sound department.

Cantor Camera Shot: They are shooting a scene in the outdoor amusement park built for "Strike Me Pink." Eddie Cantor walks from one concession stand to another singing a song. Then a chorine strolls across the set in front of the camera, ruining the take. Director Norman Taurog and Cantor have to start all over again.

The chorine says to another, gleefully: "I ruined a scene for Cantor." She is proud about it. "Now they know I'm in the picture."

OVER at Columbia they are making a short with the three stooges. Of course, the shooting is fast and furious. They have more scenes photographed in an hour than the average picture has during an entire day. The three stooges are doing their stuff, and looking entirely out of place are two foils, a woman in an evening gown and a man in a tuxedo. The big billing on this comedy will be the stooges, but the woman and the man, acting as foils, were once far more important in pictures than the stooges.

The woman in the evening gown, is Mildred Harris, the former Mrs. Charlie Chaplin. The man is Kenneth Harlan, a popular leading man in his day. It was in 1916 that Mildred Harris and Kenneth Harlan played the star roles in a flicker for Universal. Now they both look fine and seem to enjoy playing stooges for the stooges.

It is a buffet dinner in the theater that Ziegfeld is giving to the members of his show in the flicker, "The Great Ziegfeld." William Powell, portraying Ziegfeld, strolls about seeing that his show girls don't eat too much. The buffet table is stacked with chicken, ham, duck, tongue, pheasant, etc. It is real food and the amount spent to purchase it for this sequence is $350. When the scene is completed, the food will be given to several charity organizations. The show girls have a fine time eating for the camera, especially one of the prettiest, Pauline Craig, who doesn't seem to be acting. Again and again Director Victor Flemming orders another take, and the gals take another portion of food. They have been doing this all morning when suddenly the assistant director shouts: "That'll be all now, girls. One hour for lunch."

• • • •

THE front of the Writers Building at the Fox-Twentieth Century Studio is surrounded by a false front, and is being used as the castle in the flicker, "Professional Soldier."

A scene with Freddie Bartholomew and Victor McLaglen is now being filmed on the lawn. Director Tay Garnett holds his cane and tells the players what to do. The writers in the building can't use their typewriters, they can't get phone calls and they are not permitted to talk—they must whisper—when the camera is turning. Bartholomew and McLaglen are acting right under Gene Fowler's window. Fowler wrote the dialogue for "Professional Soldier," but now he is trying to do another scenario. He tries to sneak a few words out on the typewriter. Director Garnett shouts: "Watch that typewriter. We've got a picture to make." Fowler opens the window and hollers: "If it wasn't for this typewriter you wouldn't be able to do what you're doing."

In "Ceiling Zero," James Cagney and June Travis are playing a scene for Director Howard Hawks. Cagney is the aviator called Dizzy, and in this particular scene he is supposed to pull Miss Travis toward him, hold her in his arms and kiss her. She is supposed to draw away from him, saying: "No, Dizzy, no." Cagney and June Travis rehearse it several times, and now this is a take.

Cagney pulls Miss Travis toward him. She doesn't draw away. She leans closer. She forgets her lines. She lets Cagney kiss her and says: "Oh, Jimmy, oh."

Heavy Rains Remove Peril of Forest Fires

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 29.—Heavy rains today have removed temporarily at least the menace of forest fires, which have broken out in this section and in nearby Pennsylvania timberlands.

CCC workers from Fort Frederick extinguished a fire in Blairs Valley, which burned a 5-acre tract over the week-end. Another fire burned over 30 acres of timber at Cold Springs Hollow and another 4 acres between Roxbury and Amberson Valley. Both of these fires were brought under control by CCC workers.

Fire Laid to Hornet's Nest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 29.—A hornet's nest caused a $300 fire at the home of Edgar Snively here Saturday. The fire is said to have started when children attempted to burn out a hornet's nest which was located near the roof of the home.

Franklin For AAA Plan.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 29.—By a vote of 282 to 25 Franklin County farmers went on record Saturday as favoring the continuance of the AAA's crop adjustment program. According to the Corn-Hog Control Association there have been 102 contract signers in the Chambersburg territory, 30 in the Waynesboro terirtory; 17 in Mercersburg; 75 in Orrstown and 88 in the Dry Run district.

Missions Discussed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Oct. 29.—The First Baptist Church here was host today to the Shenandoah Mission Rally. Among the speakers was the Rev. W. C. West Virginian Admits Attempt to Kill Wife

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Harry Beard, who was arrested Wednesday on a charge of having attempted to kill his wife with a shotgun, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned yesterday before a justice here, and was ordered held for action of the grand jury. The magistrate said Beard admitted the shooting, but insisted he did not know why he had done it.

Officers charged that Beard, after a quarrel with his wife, obtained a shotgun and fired a shot at her, the load tearing a large hole in the fender of a motor car of Constable C. D. Jack, who had been called to the home because of a disturbance.

Diffenbaugh Fights Through Rain to First District Open Title

Gallico

Primo Unimproved By Brutal Beatings Still Can Take It.

By Paul Gallico.
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—There is a prize fight scheduled for our big fight shed next Friday night from which I shall be absent owing to the face of being en route to Columbus, Ohio, to see what has built itself up to be the big game of the year—Ohio State-Notre Dame. I do not expect to regret this absence, since one of the parties involved is a former heavyweight champion of the world, Primo Carnera. I may be wrong, but I do not think that Carnera can show me anything I hove not seen before. I do not see how he can be any better than he ever was, which was none too good, and all the signs point that, if anything, he will be worse. I never heard anyone being improved by a beating, and Carnera has absorbed two brutal lickings.

It is a great pity and shame to send this big, innocent man back to the filthy ring, and I do not particularly admire Signor Soresi for it. And yet, I suppose that big stomach must be filled, extravagant tastes must be gratified, and civilization's job of wrecking a simple soul must be completed. Carnera never really won his championship. He was maneuvered into it. He can never be a champion on his own merits, because they are the wrong kind of merits for that sort of thing.

Carnera is essentially a gentle soul, like all big men. A victory over Neusel, himself no star, will not eliminate the two factors that keep Carnera from being a fighter. He can not punch and he can not take it. A punch on thec hin tips him over.

It would pay an editor to contact Mr. Walter (Good Time Charley) Friedman, and make it worth while to him to recount the true story of Carnera's early days as a prize fighter. Friedman was associated with the crew that exploited him, and it a great story. I was talking to Friedman about those days one afternoon out at Pompton Lakes during one of Joe Louis' training spells. Friedman said:

"We did all right with that big guy. You know that, don't you? But it was our tough luck that you come walking into Paris the night he fights Bouquillon. Anybody who saw that one knew the truth about the guy. He couldn't take a punch on the chin, and he couldn't hit a lick. You were always on to him. We had a sweet thing with that guy, outside of New York, thoug . . ."

NOBODY was allowed to hit Carnera about the head. He could take it in the body and still can. But the nerve line from brain to legs are cut with the first hard blow to the jaw. He has pride as big as his body, and continues to get up as long as he is able. But I don't think there is an ounce of real cruelty or ferocity in his makeup. The glare, the snarl, the bared, snaggle teeth, all is excellent stagecraft, the soe remnants of the things Leon See, his first teacher and manager, taught him in the early days of the clean up.

What a man Carnera would have been if he had had a little of Luis Firpo's rage and truculence. You could get old Firpo to try to kill a man with those bags around his hands. He was really and truly savage in the ring. Primo merely goes through the motions, self-driven.

One wonders whether promoters would dare try to maneuver Carnera into a return match with Joe Louis, and whether anybody would go to see it. I would, if I were paid for it, as I am, but I would consider that I was earning my money, and entitled, perhaps, to a little overtime. It is cold cruelty to exhibit Carnera in any ring from now on. It was cruelty years back. But now that the veil is off, now that we know the truth about the man and his lack of ability, there really seems to be no excuse for it but the bare necessity to live. There is no telling how much money Primo has. No one ever tells you the truth about such things.

No, I'm glad I'm missing that one Friday night, because there is something unclean and soiling about it. It is a fair enough match, because Neusel is not a hard hitter, and is no world beater. But the mere spectacle of Carnera in a ring again, with boxing gloves laced to his hands is a reproach.

IT makes me feel a little crawly to feel that I was in any way way connected with the business, that I helped to build him up even with destructive criticism, that I lacked the courage in those early days when he was rackerteer-manager to shout—"these are foul and evil men who are doing an unclean thing. Why do we stand for them?" The story of the feast of the carrion birds off that helpless carcass is a terrible one. There wasn't one decent or sweet smelling thing connected with it from start to finish.

From start to end it was a ride through sewage. The one small light in the darkness was the pride and courage of the victim. One cannot admire his stupidity, but one does feel sympathy for his plight. If he has good management now, it is too late. It might be better for all of us if we were allowed to forget Primo Carnera and the slimy deeds that made him possible.

Wise County Games.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Norton, Va., Oct. 29.—With the teams heading into the homeward stretch, Wise County conference fans will see plenty of action on this week's schedule that sends Big Stone Gap to Coeburn on Friday night; St. Paul to Appalachia and Norton to Wise on Saturday.

All three games will have their bearing on deciding the ultimate championship.

Home Course Pro Shoots 289 Total

Leaders of First Day Slip Near End of 72-Hole Play.

By Dave Herman.

THERE is an old saying that goes something like this:

"Hope long deferred is often sweet in realization."

George Diffenbaugh, that little man from Indian Spring Country Club, knows how sweet it is, for yesterday, after ten years of patient waiting, he came through with his first important golf championship.

Diffenbaugh won the District Open championship over his home course with a brilliant 72-hole total of 289, and thus pocketed first-prize money of $75.

No man ever fought harder to win this, the first money tournament in the history of the District Golf Association. Through 36 holes yesterday he battled a rainstorm and a cold wind to hang up scores of 71 and 73, while the leaders of the first day were falling victims of the cruel weather.

Diffenbaugh triumphed by a six-stroke margin. Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, who tied with Hugh McLellan, of Gibson Island course, Baltimore, at the half-way mark, wound up in a deadlock for second place with Al Houghton, late of Kenwood, now of Virginia Beach.

Spencer finished with 72—72—75—76—295 and Houghton, 72—72—75—75—295. They each received $32.50 for his efforts.

Fourth money, $20, went to McLellan, who cooled off in the morning after his hot 144 of Monday, and was forced to rally on the final 18 to qualify as a prize winner.

The amateur prize was won by Levi Yoder, host club ace, who shot 71—79—75—76—301.

Indian Spring's course, a quagmire from the rain, held no terror as far as little Diffenbaugh was concerned. With unruffled calm, Diffenbaugh shot a par-equaling 71 in the morning to snatch the lead from Spencer, who posted a 75, after a penalty stroke cost him a six on the eighteenth hole.

Three-Stroke Lead.

With rounds of 74-71—145 to his credit, Diffenbaugh moved into a three-stroke leod, with a 54-hole total of 216. Spencer had 219 and Hougton and Ralph Beach, of Suburban, were next with 220. McLellan, erratic, took 79, and trailed Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, and Frankie Cunningham, of Burning Tree, by a stroke. Also to be reckoned with was Leo Walper with 225.

Diffenbaugh maintained his steady pace through the rainy, dreary afternoon, turning in 36, one over par, with only a three-putt green on the eighth to mar a perfect 9. The championship just about sewed up, Diffenbaugh made only one mistake for the next nine holes. He underclubbed his approach on the eleventh, and took a 5. Otherwise his golf for that side was orthodox and perfect, and he finished with 73. His closest pursurers, however, failed to make any appreciable gains.

The new champion had only three birdies to show for the 36 holes. He had one on the short sixth in the morning, his third deuce in as many rounds on this hole; another on the twelfth, where he chipped in from 40 feet for a 3, and another on the par 5 fifteenth. He had nary a birdie in the afternoon.

As a matter of fact for the 72 holes Diffenbaugh 3-putted only three greens. But any time a golfer shoots 36 holes in a rainstorm in two over par, and 72 holes in only five over par—that is some kind of championship goli. That's what Diffenbaugh did.

Missing the select circle by a stroke was Leo Walper, driving range professor, who finished with a beautiful 72 for a 297 total. Gillie Cunningham, of Burning Tree, shot the last 18 in 71, but his total was 300.

High Schools Idle as Rain Descends

Eastern-Roosevelt Series Game Will Be Played This Afternoon.

By John R. Vosburgh.

EASTERN and Roosevelt High schools were cleverly outmaneuvered yesterday by Quarterback Jupe Plurius, an old gent who has beat many a good football team in his day. Old Jupe called for a series of reverses—weather reverses—which had both Eastern and the Rough Riders checked long before game time. Dominating the Eastern High field completely, he finally forced Coaches Lynn Woodworth, of Roosevelt, and Artie Boyd, of Eastern, to abscond. They will make another attempt to play their interhigh game today.

The postponement did not particularly irritate Coach Woodworth, whose squad, sorely beset by injuries, can well take advantage of an extra day of convalescence. Assuming the downpour dose not continue, the game, third of the interhigh title race, will be played at 3:30 p. m. at Eastern field.

A few changes in the Rough Rider line-up will be noticeable due to injuries rather than to the trouncings Roosevelt took last week from Tech and George Washington, of Alexandria. The Tech game in particular bruised up the boys extensively.

Kolius Will Idle.

Spiro Kolius, co-captain and probably the team's outstanding player, will not start at his customary left-end assignment. The injured wingman will give way to Loyal Grimm, who has been shifted from the backfield. Bernie McDonald, young 160-pound sophomore, will get the center starting assignment instead of Web Fisher, also on the injured list.

Young MacDonald will be playing alongside his brother, Lloyd, who will draw the left-guard post again instead of Julius Lewis, regular guard, another injured member. The Roosevelt backfield supply is a bit limited, Ed Lyman, quarterback; Kollmyer and Dick Grant, halves, both nursing injuries. The latter two only slightly handicapped, will start, however.

The Rough Riders have noted an upswing in morale of late. The brief ground-gaining flash displayed against Tech in the first period was an indication of something or other and, according to some Roosevelt observers it is likely to be harnessed for a longer stretch today, to Eastern detriment.

Eastern spent the day chafing at inaction and confident of keeping its uncrossed goal line still free from opposing cleats.

King 'Tip' O'Neill, Dead Claimed Diamond Fame

Wichita, Kans., Oct. 29 (AP).—King "Tip" O'Neill, 76, who said he was the noted baseball player with the St. Louis Browns a half century ago, died in the county home here today.

Almost friendless and declining help from old baseball fans, he had lain on his bed for weeks contradicting statements by sports writers all over the United States that he was not the famed baseball player.

Comely Jewess Practices for German Olympic Team

Va.-Maryland Battle Seen Thriller

Reserves Give Old Line Edge; Banner Crowd Looms Saturday.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

UNIVERSITY, Va., Oct. 29.—Maryland's gridiron invasion of Virginia next Saturday should result in as fast action within Scott Stadium as has been seen on the Cavaliers' girdiron this fall.

Maryland supporters may also swell the cowd to one of the largest that has ever seen a game played in Scot Stadium. Old Line followers are coming from Washington on a special train and will bring their 60-piece student band with them.

Two of the South's bets ends will be matched in this contest. Capt. John Leys, of Virginia, and Vic Willis, of Maryland, hav both been nominated for All-America selections by a national syndicate conducting a week-by-week survey of the Nation's gridirons.

Both Dangerous on Passes.

Leys and Willis are both big fast men who are dangerous offensive threats as pass receivers. Both are deadly tacklers who are with difficulty blocked out on defense. Close observers of football will have plenty to watch if they follow the play of this pair.

In Bill Guckeyson the Terrapins will bring a four-sport athlete who is a star in basketball, track and lacrosse as well as in fottball. It was Guckeyson's versatility in punting and running that did much to bring Maryland a victory over Florida last week.

"Bus" Male, Virginia's triple-threat, can just about match the Maryland ace, save in size. Guckeyson is 6 feet tall and weighs 180 pounds, while Male is 4 inches shorter and 23 pounds lighter. But he is just as versatile as the Old Liner.

Fastest of Cavalier Backs.

An injury prevented Male from playing football last fall, but he won his "V" in basketball and in baseball. He was leading hitter on the diamond club. Male is the fastest of Virginia's backs, and he shares pnting duty with Harry Martin and Cullen Wilkin.

Maryland is favored in Saturday's game largely because of the strength of the Old Line reserves. Against Florida, one man less than two full teams were called into action by Coaches Faber and Dobson.

Lack of replacements has worried the Cavalier coaches all fall, and their need may be critical on Saturday if they are forced to do without two of the line regulars, Steve Davenport, center, and Billy Weeks, tackle, both hurt in the V. M. I. game.

Bass Fish Planted.

Inter-American Horse Show May Become Permanent Here

By Bill McCormick.

THE unqualified artistic and financial success of the recent Inter-American Horse Show probably will result in this—the only outdoor international exhibition ever attempted in the United States—becoming a permanent fixture in the Capital.

That the show was entirely satisfactory fram the viewpoint of the spectators and participants is evidenced by the spontaneous demand for its repetition, a procedure that had been tentatively planned by the sponsors from the outset.

As to the financial success of the show, those in charge of money matters still are counting up proceeds from minor sources, such as the sale of programs, concessions, etc., so no accurate figures are yet available, but it has been announced that the project was a "decided financial success."

Proceeds Help Show.

Part of the proceeds from this year's exhibition will be given to help defray expenses of the Olympic equestrian and pentathlon teams in the forth coming games. The balance will go into a fund for the conduct of next year's Inter-American Show.

From the proceeds of this year's show, it is believed enough will be available to bring here next year teams from many more countries. Those who conceived the exhibition fondly hope some day to build it into an outdoor counterpart of the National Horse Show held in Madison Square Garden every year.

Ideal climatic conditions existed throughout the three days dedicated to the exhibition this year, which may not always be the case. Bad weather would prove a major drawback if more team were brought in, as the only available indoor spot to which the show might be shifted—the Fort Myer riding hall—is hardly large enough to accommodate a crowd that would meet a big overhead.

Because of the tremendous expense of maintaining foreign teams in this country, it is not feasible to hold the show before the latter part of October. When held at this time, teams which are to compete in the national, starting November 6, can be brought to Washington with a minimum of expense.

Need Improvement.

The Rock Creek grounds of the Riding and Hunt Club upon which the Inter-American were held, did not prove entirely satisfactory to sponsors of the show, although spectator arrangements were wellnigh perfect. A movement to have the National Capital Park Planning Commission make certain changes in the layout probably will be put afoot in the very near future.

Members of the American Olympic team, beaten by the Chileans in the international team jumping contest, do not believe their defeat presages a shellacking at the national, nor any great weakness in the Olympics. They point out that the U. S. Army did much better the closing day of the show, indicating their poor performances on the first two days were attributable to lack of schooling and conditioning, rather than to poor material.

Grid Death List Is Nineteen For Year

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Nineteen deaths attributable to football, directly or indirectly, have occurred so far this season, an Associated Press compilation showed today.

The list of fatalities included one college player, two sandlitters, 15 in high school ranks, annd one at a Civilian Conservation Corps camp.

The college victim was Walter M. Back, of the University of Oregon. Death was due to infection of a leg which was believed to have been injured last year.

Three of the schoolboys met death in a peculiar manner. Andrew Cresping, of New Orleans, injured his foot and when he leaned over to unlace the shoe he dropped dead from a heart attack. Robert Mansfield, of Oakland, Calif., died of a cerebral hemorrhage after running head-on into a telephone pole as he tried to catch a pass. Francis A. Rohmer, jr., of Newton, Mass., was shocked to death by an electric pad which was being applied to a bruised thigh.

Other Victims.

The other victims were Walter Hartgian, CCC Camp No. 20, Barnum Pond, N. Y., brain concussion; Horace D. Weaver, Tavaries (Fla.) High School, punctured lung; Joseph Callahan, Bridgeport (Conn.) Central High School, internal injuries; John Ochoa, Anaheim, Calif., brain concussion; Paul Lewellen, Uniontown, Pa., cerebral hemorrhage; Cyril Wilt, Pontiac, Mich., cerebral hemorrhage; Joseph Green, Athens, Ohio, blood poisoning of bruised leg; ack Fenwick, Wellesley, Mass., internal injuries; John McKee, Kansas City, broken vertebrae; Frank Wolford, Grove City, Pa., heart attack; John Wiley Christian, Moberly, Mo., cerebral meningitis; John Fara, Hagerstown, Md., broken neck; Ozro Stephens, Dimmitt, Tex., blood stream infection.

The sandlot victims were Harold Roach, of Canisted, N. Y., and John S. Ahlgren. Roach died of concussion and Ahlgren from an infection of the knee.

Dead Heat in England.

Newmarket, England, Oct. 29 (AP). A dead-heat marked the running of the Criterion Stakes today when Sir Abe Bailey's Dan Bulger and A. de Rothschild's Midstream finished all-square at the end of the 6-furlong sprint for 2-year-olds.

Strike for Longer Football Practices

By the Associated Press.

Gloucester, N. J., Oct. 29.—High school students, including the entire football squad, walked out of their classes today and began picketing the school demanding shorter hours to give the football team more time to practice.

School officials said, however, that unless the strike was called off the entire squad will be declared ineligible for the game next Saturday with Pitman High.

The Student Council, which was in session at the time of the walkout, went outside and talked to the pickets. Many returned to classes. Carlos D. Paisley, coach, advised the remaining pickets to return, but none did.

Bailey, Bonino Win Praise At W. & L.

Fullback and Tackle Are Providing Features of Generals' Play.

LEXINGTON, Va., Oct. 29.—Fullbacks and tackles don't come much better than Capt. Jack Bailey and big Hugo Bonino, of the Washington and Lee Generals.

That's what the football-wise of this section are saying as the Generals start on the home stretch of their 1935 football schedule. And it isn't all local opinion, it's the opinion of experts drifting into Lexington from all parts of the country.

Bailey, Washington and Lee's 200-pound fullback, was off to a slow start this season, but in the past two games he has been playing what coaches call the best football of his career. He's a specialist at defensive play, and in the V. P. I. game at Bluefield last Saturday he made tackles enough to stave off some of the Techmen's big thrusts.

Bonino Shifts Posts.

Bonino, a 140-pounder, is generally conceded one of the best all-around linemen who has ever played for Washington and Lee. His work at guard last year was a feature of the Generals' successful quest for top honors in the State and the Southern Conference. This year, at tackle, he has attracted the attention of coaches all over the East who comment freely on his abilities. For all his size, he is fast and apparently always in top condition.

Last year Bonino captained the Washington and Lee wrestling team, and went to the finals of the national intercollegiates. There is indication that he is regarded as a contender for the Olympic team, and it is believed he will enter the tryouts. He was Southern Conference heavyweight mat champion last year in addition to his other wrestling accomplishments.

Both Are Seniors.

The two hail from widely separated parts of the country. Bailey is a Kentuckian, from Maysville; Bonino lives at Hawthorne, N. J. Both are seniors.

Their next chance for action on the gridiron will come this weekend, when the Generals meet West Virginia University at Charleston, W. Va., in a game that has become one of the classics of this section.

West. Md. Stresses Offense in Drills

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 29.—Western Maryland's football program was completely changed today as Head Coach Charley Havens, preparing for Saturday's homecoming game with Baltimore, announced all stress would be put on the offense.

To date the Terrors have spent most of their time on defense, holding off the thrusts of such powerful teams as Villanova, Penn State, Buckness and Mt. St. Mary's.

But Saturday the signal caller, Cliff Lathrop, will be instructed to go after touchdowns and let offense substitute for defense.

With a record homecoming crowd in prospect, and 300 followers of the Baltimore Bees planning a trip, he Terrors will be drilled to put on a show to include every play in the bag.

Initial Piedmont Hunt Friday at Upperville

Upperville, Va., Oct. 29.—The Piedmont Fox Hounds, oldest recognized hunt in America, will hold its first scheduled meet of the season at Upperville on Friday, November 1. The hounds will be cast at 10 a. m. The meets will be held twice a week, on Tuesdays and Fridays, weather permitting, during the season. Dr. A. C. Randolph is master of foxhounds and R. S. Peach is secretary-treasurer.

The schedule is as follows: Friday, November 1, Upperville; Tuesday, November 5, Atoka; Friday, November 8, Blakely Grove; Tuesday, November 12, Kennels; Friday, November 15, Five Points; Tuesday, November 19, Pot House; Friday, November 22, Willisville; Tuesday, November 26, Philomont; Friday, November 29, Grafton Gate.

Louis Vs. Retzlaff.

Review Lists All-America Candidates

West Offers Galaxy of Ace Backs; Ohio State and Iowa Lead.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The line is already forming on the left for this year's All-America parade. Backfield aces have been running wild, from coast to coast, on the greatest scoring spree American gridirons have witnessed in at least a decade. It's about time, therefore, to call the mid-season All-Star roll.

With a growing emphasis upon team play, where the most successful college aggregations are those equipped to send two or three complete elevens into action during the afternoon, it has become increasingly difficult to detect All-America talent. The era when a football player remained in the game as long as he could regain an upright position have pretty well vanished. This is an age of specialists on the gridiron, where the premium is placed on short, but swift, production and where the 60-minute team, such as Yale's array, is a rarity.

Midwest Offers Stars.

The Middle West, during recent years, has contributed more than an ordinary share of ball-lugging talent and it isn't shirking the responsibility this season. Lund and Kostka, of Minnesota; Purvis and Carter, of Purdue, no longer startle Big Ten fans with their exploits, but you've been hearing plenty, with good reason, about the deeds of Crayne and Simmons, of Iowa; Williams and Heekin, of Ohio State, and Berwanger, of Chicago, among others.

Undoubtedly the slipperiest broken-field runners in the Big Ten are Ozzie Simmons, the Negro flash, and "Jumping Joe" Williams, spark plug ball-carrier of the "Scarlet Scourge" of Ohio State. Simmons revived memories of Red Grange by his exploits against Illinois last Saturday, but his teammate and captain, Dick Crayne, is the all-round star of the Iowa eleven. Crayne can block, kick and tackle, besides carry the ball.

Berwanger, on a team that has no title aspirations, is another all-around ace. Despite injuries, he was rated the most valuable performer in the Big Ten last year, and he is having another great season under the tutelage of Clark Daniel Shaughnessy. Michigan's Bill Penner is the passing artist of the Big Ten. Minnesota's Sheldon is cast in the same mould as such other noted Gopher line-buckers as Joesting and Nagurski.

Cheshire Is Coast's Ace.

Not so much has been heard about him in Ohio State's powerhouse parade, but Coach Francis Schmidt rates his quarterback, Stan Pincura, a senior from Lorain, Ohio, does most of the passing and is a great blocker and defensive performer.

The ball-toting sensation of the West Coast is Chuck Cheshire, of the University of California, at Los Angeles. He ran wild against Oregon last Saturday, scoring two touchdowns on long gallops and passin gof two more. He has taken the Coast spotlight from Stanford's Bobby Grayson, a 1934 all-America back, and Washington's brilliant ball carrier, Byron Haines.

Moving into the rugged southwest sector, where scouts report the pace is swifter than ever before among a group of top-notch teams, it appears Southern Methodist's Bobby Wilson, a 150-pound halfback, has taken the play from another all-American star, Bill Wallace, of Rice. Wilson is the conference high-scorer, with 48 points, sharing his team's offensive honors with Fullback Harry Shuford. John McCauley, Rice quarterback, also is having a big year.

Three "Irish" Stand Out.

Nebraska's Llowd Cardwell, who started off sensationally, is the outstanding back of the Big Six. Marquette has a star in Ray (Buzz) Buivid. Notre Dame has them two and three deep in the backfield, but Bill Shakespeare, Andy Pilney and Fred Carideo have been conspicuous.

In the South Alabama's Riley Smith has been outstanding in the come-back o fthe oRse Bowl champions. He is rated the South's best quarterback. Don Jackson, ace back of the unbeaten North Carolina Tarheels, has entered the all-America picture with his record of 5.7 yards pe rtry in five games and 21 completed passes out of 38 thrown. Georgia's John Bond is a triple threat ace.

Wisconsin—Its All-Time Honor Roll

O'Dea's Dropkicks of '90's Bright Chapter of Grid History.

By George Trevor,
Nationally Known Football Authority.

WHEN the strains of On-Wisconsin roll shoreward across Mendota's ripples the hearts of Cardinal supporters beat a trifle faster. Proudly perched among her four lakes like a ruby surrounded by sapphires old Wisconsin sits serenely watching her football sons pass the torch from generation to generation. Cardinal football traditions date back to the starry days when Pat O'Dea, the Irishman from Australia, booted those incredible dropkicks end over end toward the distant crossbar.

O'Dea chose to pull an Enoch Arden after graduation and vanished under an alias to the port of missing men. He voluntarily lost his identity to escape the notoriety that football brings to campus heroes. His dramatic return to character and appearance at Camp Randall—the Wisconsin football field—ranks as one of sports most gripping human interest stories.

A crackajack rubgy player in Australia, Pat became the greatest all-around kicker American football has known. Wisconsin's entire attack was built around his remarkable toe. Fifty-yard kicks were nothing for the gaunt Anzac who often got off 80-yard boots under pressure. His record dropkick covered 62½ yards against Nebraska in 1898.

Wisconsin had only one Rollie Williams, the shiftiest, trickiest and slipperiest of all Badger broken field runners. No other ball carrier exhibited such mastery of the pivot and spin. John Richards later famous as coach of several Wisconsin

Galmica Captures 2-Year-Old Feature of Laurel Racing Card

Winner Pays $7 as 6,000 Look On

Galmica paid 17 to his backers.

Those of the 6,000 crowd who arrived early enough to play the daily double made the combination of Boocord and Camino Real the favorite. The pay-off on the heavily played pair was $15.10.

Jockey "Moose" Peters was injured in the first race when Canteret fell, soon after Starter Milton had sent the field away. Peters, one of the Nation's leading riders, was given a hasty examination in the track hospital, which revealed a fracture of the collar bone. He was taken to South Baltimore General Hospital. Canteret was in close quarters in the center of the bulky field and many in the stands did not know the horse had fallen.

Boocord proved the winner of the sprint at an $8.20 mutuel. Jockey H. Dabson rated him behind the pace of Vanda Cerulea and Dixie Princess to mid-stretch, where he put on the pressure and the young gelding drew out. Dixie Princess was second Bally Bay, the favorite, was third.

Loses Stirrup, Wins Race.

Jockey W. Smiley, a colored boy, was the hero of the second race, riding Blackcock, the property of Thomas Hitchcock. Smiley lost his right stirrup, the metal pulling off the second time around the course. Despite the handicap, he brought the big gelding home a nose in front of Dock Light, with Swansea third.

Blackcock, an odds-on favorite at a $3.30 mutuel, was under tight restraint the first time around the 2-mile course. Then Smiley moved him up, only to fall back, and it appeared to those who knew nothing of the broken stirrup that the colored boy was riding poorly. However, Blackcock gained steadily going to the last two jumps, took command and, with Smiley kicking and scuffling, he barely lasted to withstand the final rush of Dock Light.

The second odds-on favorite in a row scored in the third race when Camino Real outlasted seven other sprinters. The son of Hand Grenade was in front after the first few jumps, and there was none to catch him. Sunned and Red Badge were closest at the end. The winner paid $3.80.

Songstone, excellently ridden by Apprentice Jockey R. Booker, took the fifth race in a driving finish with Cinar. Pepper Patch, the early pacemaker, was third in the field of a dozen juveniles. Songstone rewarded the faithful with a $13.30 mutuel.

Adownpour came just before the sixth race and Jinnee found the soft track that she likes, under her hooves. Under Coucci's handling, Jinnee defeated Petee Blue and Four Spot to pay an $11.20 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOCORD, $8.20, $4.80, $2.60; DIXIE PRINCESS, $12.30, $6.20; BALLY BAY, $2.90.

BOOCORD, a keen factor in the early racing and kept on the outside of the leaders, responded strongly to take command inside the closing furlong, then came out approaching the finish. DIXIE PRINCESS followed VANDA CERULEA closely from the start, then fought it out with good energy when the real issue came. BALLY BAY went in the first flight and held on with good courage in the late stages. VANDA CERULEA was hard ridden to hold a slight lead, saved ground, then swerved to the inside after reaching the home stretch. VERITAS could not improve her position at any stages. DALMATIA was outrun. TODY CON lacked speed. CANTERET broke in tight quarters and lost her rider directly after the start. She went lame.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good and fast. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:59. Off at once. Winner, Thomas Hitchcock's br. or blk. g. (6), by Despote—Siskin. Trained by P. Green. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:57 2-5 (14 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACKCOCK, $3.30, $2.70, $2.30; DOCK LIGHT, $5.80, $3.50; SWANSEA, $3.20.

BLACKCOCK, strongly reserved for the first mile, went to the outside when engaging the leaders at the twelfth jump, took an easy lead after Smiley lost the use of his stirrup irons, continued gamely and barely lasted to withstand DOCK LIGHT. DOCK LIGHT, rated close up for the first mile, took command at the tenth fence, was hard ridden, then came again when Smiley was unable to give the winner full justice. SWANSEA fenced cleverly at all of her fences, but could not stay when placed to a hard drive. QUICK VERDICT raced forwardly, but could not better his position.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:34. Winner, L. M. Reuter's b. g. (4), by Hand Grenade—King Belle. Trained by Phil Reuter. Value to winner, $625; second, $160; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23. 0:47. 1:12 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CAMINO REAL, $3.80, $3.10, $2.60; SUNNED, $6.10, $3.30; RED BADGE, $3.10.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $15.10.

CAMINO REAL, moving into a clear lead soon after the start, shook off RED BADGE, saved ground, and had enough in reserve to stall off SUNNED. Latter, close up from the start, responded to strong urging and came with good courage for the final drive. RED BADGE was strongly handled throughout and barely lasted to stall off MINTON. Latter, slow to settle in his stride, circled his field and finished stoutly. TORFRIDA could not reach a contending position. SMEAR passed tiring horses. BLIND PLAYDEMA had brief early speed.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:00. Off at 3:01. Winner, Shandon Farm's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GALMICA, $7.00, $3.10, $2.20; BOOTLESS, $2.80, $2.10; STAR SCOUT (entry), $2.10.

GALMICA, rated under steadying restraint for the first six furlongs, moved to the front midway of the final turn, then nodding on strongly under a hard drive outstayed BOOTLESS. Latter, placed forwardly in the early running, challenged strongly in the last half-mile, but weakened during the last sixteenth while under punishment. STAR SCOUT came through on the inside entering the home stretch and finished courageously. REMINDING, a slow beginner, closed full of courage in the last five-sixteenths. EASTWARD had nice speed for six furlongs, then tired.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:38. Winner, C. J. MacLeod's dk. b. or br. f. (2), by Caruso—Grapestone. Trained by G. M. Brain. Value to winner, $675; second, $125; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5. 0:48. 1:14. 1:40 1-5. 1:45 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SONGSTONE, $13.30, $6.70, $5.30; CINAR, $8.10, $6.10; PEPPER PATCH, $9.00.

SONGSTONE went to the inside when reaching the back stretch, gained a forward position when nearing the final turn, swung to the outside of the pacemaker when straightened into the home stretch, then, finishing determinedly, was up right at the end. CINAR, rated for the first six furlongs, assumed command when ready, opened a slight winning lead, but tired suddenly in the last sixteenth. PEPPER PATCH was steadied until challenged, responded willingly, but could not stay. EVENING HOUR raced within striking distance of the leaders and came gamely under a hard drive. SOMEONE ELSE, shuffled back at the last turn, secured racing room thereafter and finished in bold fashion. MAUVE DECADE weakened gradually after six furlongs.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but Naval Cadet. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:02½. Winner, Rose Run's ch. c. (3), by Genie—Supper Time. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JINNEE, $11.20, $5.80, $4.00; PETEE BLUE, $15.00, $6.90; FOUR SPOT, $5.70.

JINNEE, taken under slight restraint during the first six furlongs, went to the pacemaker steadily when shaken up in the last five-sixteenths, then, finishing gamely, came out slowly in the closing furlong. PETEE BLUE showed good speed while setting the pace, saved ground and continued stoutly after being overtaken. FOUR SPOT went prominently and held on well. BEHEMOTH faltered after making a strong effort in the last half-mile. NAVAL CADET broke poorly out of hand and raced below his best form. SHIP EXECUTIVE was never a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:32. Winner, Shandon Farm's br. g. (3), by Sun Flag—Gotta Gonow. Trained by J. J. Greely. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5. 0:49. 1:15. 1:42 2-5. 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSS, $6.50, $3.90, $3.20; FAIRLY WILD, $7.30, $4.60; REPEAL, $3.30.

ROSS, favored by improved handling and going in improved form, reached the leaders rapidly, drew clear entering the home stretch and had speed in reserve at the end. FAIRLY WILD improved his position steadily while saving ground and finished gamely. REPEAL had too much taken out of him getting to the front and he tired when the real test came. CHEROKEE SAL came through on the inside entering the home stretch, but could not threaten nearing the finish.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISHING STAR, $10.90, $5.30, $4.10; POST BRIGADE, $27.70, 112.80; BRAD, $5.40.

WISHING STAR, permitted to settle in her best stride before moving into contention, went to the leaders rapidly in the last half-mile, secured a short lead when reaching the home stretch and outstayed POST BRIGADE nearing the finish. POST BRIGADE gained a forward position in the late stages, saved a lot of ground entering the home stretch when coming through on the inside and fought it out gamely at the end. BRAD worked his way up gradually and came with good speed in the final test.

Steel Deficit Slightly More In 3d Quarter

$9,826,767 Loss in 1934 Is Cut to $1,305,205 This Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation today ordered a dividend of 50 cents on the preferred stock. Similar payments have been made quarterly on the senior shares since January, 1933, when the old $7 annual rate was abandoned.

The corporation reported total earnings of $13,469,570 for the September quarter after ordinary operating expenses against $14,117,864 for the June quarter and $3,768,863 for the September quarter last year.

After interest, depreciation, depletion, overhead expense on iron ore, etc., there was a deficit of $1,305,205 against deficits of $762,493 in the second quarter and deficit of $9,826,767 in the September quarter of 1934.

After provision for the preferred dividend there was a deduction from surplus for the third quarter of $3,106,610 against $2,563,898 in the preceding quarter and $11,628,172 in the like period of last year.

The dividend on the preferred shares is payable November 29 to stock of record November 1, with this payment accumulations on the stock, which is entitled to $7 annually, will amount to $15 a share.

Shipments of finished steel products for the September quarter totaled 1,787,224 tons against 1,768,751 tons in the previous quarter and 1,118,267 tons for the September, 1934, quarter.

Taylor's Statement.

Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the corporation, in a statement issued following the board meeting, said in part:

"The operations for the third quarter average 37.7 per cent of capacity of finished products for sale, compared with 24 per cent in the corresponding quarter of 1934. Tonnage shipped in the third quarter of 1935 exceeded the second quarter tonnage by 18,473 tons. However, in the classes of the products shipped a relatively large proportion of the third quarter shipments were of the lesser priced products than was the case in the second quarter.

"At the present time operations are averaging about 42 per cent of capacity. It is believed this average will be maintained substantially throughout the fourth quarter."

Structural Steel.

New York, Oct. 29 (AP).—Contracts closed for structural steel in September are estimated at 83,449 tons, against 100,211 in August, according to the American Institute of Steel Construction.

The Ticker Tape

Steel Shares Spurt in Last Hour; Bonds Easy; Call Money Stiffens.

By Carlton A. Shively

A Special Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 29.—With stock turnover failing to reach the two million share mark for the first time since October 18, stock prices continued irregular. A short-lived last hour rally lifted the steel shares and stiffened others against profit taking, but the market lacked conviction for a determined movement in either direction. Bonds also were uncertain. Grains and cotton were steady to firm. December wheat was a half cent higher at 97⅞ cents a bushel.

Thanks to a last hour advance in the steel shares, the market was saved from going down as a colorless, spiritless and generally weaker affair. In spite of the rush of orders shortly after the opening of the final hour, the day's turnover fell far short of two million shares, being only 1,220,000 shares to 2 p. m. News on the steel companies was of no practical importance, and the movement appeared to be one better explained by the feeling on the floor of the Stock Exchange than by actual conditions.

Those close to Colorado Fuel & Iron (the issues having the sharpest rise), for example, professed to know of no particular developments, business running along at no very profitable level and no change in reorganization plans having been made. United States Steel directors met for dividends and publication of the third quarter earnings statement, but they as usual intended to make nothing public until after the close of the market. At any rate, only the usual 50-cent payment was expected on the preferred stocks, and an earnings statement showing no great change from that of second quarter.

Twin Cities Jumps.

Another little known issue, Twin Cities preferred, jumped sharply without any special reason to be found in the news of the day. While the steels were strong, the motor and accessory stocks rolled in the doldrums. Here and there a stock held firm, but nothing startling was done. Rubbers and tires were a little lower, as were the mail orders. Oils, on the other hand, were well liked. Pure oil preferred made a new top. Amerada climbed 4 points to the best price since listing on the stock exchange. Coppers were firm and silvers were higher. Rails were mixed, but Norfolk found the best price in four years. Utilities were narrow.

Foreign exchanges were dull with narrow movements, but the money market was restless as word got around that tomorrow the large banks would withdraw further offer of funds at less than three-quarters of 1 per cent for call loans, against the prevailing rate of one-quarter of 1 per cent. Owing to the increased charge for country banks placing money on call, such an increase would make profitable the receipt of out-of-town funds, and for that reason no more than one-half of 1 per cent can be made to stick, in the opinion of most observers.

Money Rates.

On its merits the money market does not rate so high a charge for call funds, but the banks feel the one-quarter of 1 per cent is unprofitable. Money is now coming here from the interior, in a seasonal movement, and the influx from abroad continues, if on a reduced scale. Meanwhile demand for funds has not yet risen much. Brokers' loans have been expanding a little for the past two or three weeks, but commercial borrowing is low.

Just the same a higher call rate, firmly established, would tend to lift time money (it brought a stiffer offering market today) and to fortify rates all around. This week's statement of reporting banks in leading cities shows a sharp fall in "other loans," but the drop was because of gold loan repayments, largely, rather than to declining commercial demand. Demand deposits again rose sharply, and bank investments increased.

Business improvement appears to be spreading, if gradually. The Northwest, for example, was severely hurt by the drought of last year, but this year is one of the most prosperous sections of the country. Farm income, as estimated by the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, last month ran two-thirds larger than a year ago, in spite of lower prices. Business in the cities, the bank reports, is neither up nor down, but it is improving in the small towns.

New York Bank Ups Call Rate To ¾ Per Cent

Stock Exchange Figure Remains Officially at ¼ Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 29.—The first break in the long period of easy money in the New York market appeared today when one large Wall street bank raised its rate on call loans to three-fourth of 1 per cent.

While the official rate on the call money desk of the New York Stock Exchange remained at one-fourth of 1 per cent, the Manufacturers Trust Co. quoted day-to-day money on security collateral at the new three-fourths of 1 per cent rate, and the rates for time money were quoted firmer by money brokers.

Money for three to six months maturity was lifted to three-eighths of 1 per cent, while previously all maturities up to six months had ruled, since June 8, at one-fourth of 1 per cent. Rates for loans of 60 days or less still remained at one-fourth of 1 per cent.

The change in the call funds rate to three-fourths of 1 per cent ends the long period since April 18 of this year in which all institutions have quoted one-fourth of 1 per cent.

From December 7, 1933 to the April date this year the now famous so-called "gentlemen's agreement" among the leading Wall Street banking firms was in effect, which pegged the call rate at 1 per cent.

Clearing House Acts.

First indications of today's stiffening of the call rate was given last Friday, when the New York clearing house association adopted a change in its constitution which set a minimum service charge of ½ of 1 per cent for its members, which include the leading Wall Street banks, in placing call loans in the New York market for out-of-town bank correspondents.

It was pointed out at the time the new clearing house rule was adopted that out-of-town banks could not put money out on call profitably in the New York money market until the rate here was above ½ of 1 per cent.

Today's action by one institution in raising the rate, which informed quarters believe will be generally followed tomorrow by other large banks, will once more make possible the loaning of call funds here by interior banks.

Allied Chemical & Dye Revises Balance Sheet

New York, Oct. 29.—Revising its balance sheet to conform to accounting requirements of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Allied Chemical and Dye Corporation has reduced its stated assets from $420,121,757 to $388,137,277, according to a registration statement amendment filed with the New York Stock Exchange yesterday.

The company also reclassified its investments, but filed its schedule of marketable securities with the SEC confidentially.

Phoenix Trust Buys Control Of United Cigar

Aim Is to Reorganize and Rebuild Big Chain System.

New York, Oct. 29.—The Phoenix Securities Corporation announced yesterday that it had purchased the controlling interest in the United Cigar Stores Company of America from George K. Morrow and companies with which Mr. Morrow is identified. The intention is to reorganize and rebuild the chain, which has been in bankruptcy since 1932. A statement by Phoenix Securities said:

"On account of many conflicting rumors, we have been approached for information concerning the purchase of a controlling interest in the United Cigar Stores Company of America, which owns and controls the Whelan Drug Stores, the third largest drug chain in the United States.

"Phoenix Securities Corporation, about a week ago, bought the Morrow group's holdings of preferred stock of United Cigar Stores Company at a price around $10.75 a share. Since that time, this trust has purchased such of the bonds of United Stores Realty Holding, Inc., and such of the common stock of United Cigar Stores Company as were held by United Stores Corporation, Tobacco Products Corporation and the Morrow group.

"These acquisitions represent approximately 50 per cent of the outstanding bonds, and over 60 per cent of the outstanding common stock of the United Cigar Stores Corporation, which has about 580 stores and approximately 600 agencies, totaling around 1,180, and controls in addition the Whelan Drug Stores Company with around 200 stores and over 100 drug agencies, totaling over 300 outlets.

First Registration Under Holding Act

The Orange & Rockland Electric Co. of Monroe, New York, has registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission as a public utility holding company under Section 5 (a) of the public utility holding company act of 1935.

This company, which is the first to register under the act, reports that it owns, controls or has the power to vote 100 per cent of the common stock of the Orange & Rockland Electric Co. of New Jersey.

Gen. Motors to Build Plant in Los Angeles

Detroit, Oct. 29 (AP).—Plans for the construction of a $2,500,000 automobile assembly plant in Los Angeles, which will be ready for operation about April 1, 1936, were announced by the General Motors Corporation this afternoon. The announcement said that the plant would be set up for the assembly of Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick motor cars with an initial capacity of from 40,000 to 50,000 cars a year. A site for the plan is now under option about six miles from Los Angeles. The exact location was not announced. General Motors said that the initial number of workmen would be about 1,500. Ground will be broken about December 1.

U. S. Savings Rise in Year $900,000,000

New York, Oct. 29.—Savings, including time deposits and postal savings deposited in banks in the United States, increased 4.1 per cent for the year closing June 29, in comparison with the preceding year, according to reports received by the savings division, American Bankers Association. The increase amounted to nearly $900,000,000 and the number of savers grew by over $1,750,000.

This percentage gain is nearly double that registered a year ago over the year closing June 30, 1933, which was 2.4 per cent, W. Espey Albig, deputy manager of the association in charge of the division says in analyzing the returns.

"The gain, which is general throughout the United States, amounts to $899,979,000," says Mr. Albig. "In only eight States is a loss shown. Thus, in two successive years savings in banks have increased. They now stand at $22,652,489,000, about one-half billion dollars less than 10 years ago and almost six billion dollars below the high point of 1930.

Grade Crossing Accidents Gain Over Last Year

2,043 Mishaps in 7 Months Resulted in 853 Deaths.

Fatalities resulting from highway-railroad grade crossing accidents totaled 123 in July, the safety section of the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of two compared with the number of fatalities in July last year.

Reports showed 214 accidents at grade crossings in July, an increase of 26 compared with July, 1934. In those accidents 284 persons were injured, a decrease of six compared with the same month the preceding year.

In the first seven months of 1935 there were 2,043 accidents at highway-railroad grade crossings, or an increase of 19 compared with the corresponding period in 1934. In those accidents 853 persons lost their lives, or an increase of 26 compared with the corresponding period last year. Persons injured in the first seven months of this year totaled 2,449, compared with 2,313 in the first seven months of 1934.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 29.—Speculative profit-taking and the lack of fresh investment buying owing mainly to the approaching elections and partly to the decreeing of sanctions, caused a generally easier tendency on the Stock Exchange today. Most sections recorded slight declines, but motor and gold mining shares were steady exceptions. The market closed easy.

Paris—Led by rentes, prices on the bourse recovered part of their early losses today as profit-taking subsided. International issues, however, were irregular. The market closed firm.

Berlin—Bonds led the slight improvement which took place on the boerse today despite the very small business transacted. The closing was quiet.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

Richfield Oil Sale Set for January 31

Los Angeles, Oct. 29.—Richard W. Millar, secretary of the Richfield reorganization committee, announced today that January 31, 1936 had been set by Federal Judge William P. James as the date when the properties of the Richfield Oil Co. of California and Pan American Petroleum Co. will be sold.

This ruling was given in answer to a petition filed by Receiver W. C. McDuffie. Counsel for the receiver stated that while there is no offer or plan of reorganization in hand it is nevertheless essential that the properties be sold.

LEGAL NOTICES

ROSSA F. DOWNING, Attorney, Woodward Building.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Holding an Equity Court. Beulah Shull Barnes Anderson, plaintiff, vs. Roy J. Anderson, defendant. Equity No. 59459. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to obtain a decree of divorce dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between the plaintiff, Beulah Shull Barnes Anderson, and the defendant, Roy J. Anderson, on the ground of desertion of the plaintiff by the defendant. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 8th day of October, 1935, ordered that the defendant, Roy J. Anderson, cause his appearance to be entered herein, on or before the FORTIETH day, exclusive of Sundays and holidays, hereof, and after the day of the first publication of this order otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in cases of default. But a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in The Washington Law Reporter, and in The Washington Post newspaper before said day, or the court: ALFRED A. WHITE, Chief Justice. A true copy. Attest: RICHARD J. HINKEL, Assistant Clerk.

Strange As It Seems —By John Hix

ON ANY winter day you can see that the rails on a railroad line have pulled apart a little because of the contraction due to cold weather. On a hot summer day the rails expand, almost closing the gaps. These little bits of open space added together over 2,000 miles of rail equal about a mile in winter. In summer the actual length of the rails on a 2,000-mile line is a mile longer than in winter—yet the railroad itself is no longer.

Frederick VIII of Denmark was traveling incognito in Hamburg in 1912 when he dropped dead on the street. No one at hand was able to identify him and he was taken to the morgue as an unknown. It was several hours before his real identity became known.

About 15 centuries before the Christian era, Thotmes III of Egypt invaded Cyprus and forced the conquered land to pay tribute. In the 3,500 years that have followed, Cyprus has changed hands 17 times—enjoying independence only once, and then but for nine years between 1184 and 1193 when it was taken by the Crusaders to be ruled by them for nearly three centuries. Egypt ruled there three different times, and after the third time Cyprus was annexed to Rome in the first century B. C.

From the earliest invasion by the Egyptians, Cyprus has been ruled in turn by these powers: Egypt, Assyria, Egypt, Persia, Athens, Tyre, Egypt, Rome, Byzantine, Arabia, Greece, Byzantine, Cyprus, the Crusaders, Venice, Turkey and England. England controls it today.

Dr. Driggs to Address Literary Club Dinner

Dr. Howard R. Driggs, professor of English education at New York University, will speak at the Authors of Books for Children banquet to be held by the Literary Club of Wilson Teachers College, November 8, in the Mayflower.

The event will celebrate the centenary of the founding of the first children's library in the United States. The professor is author of several children's books including "Live Language Lessons," a series of texts which pioneered in new methods of English teaching.

Sunday School Institute Will Meet Here Today

Five hundred church school workers in the Episcopal Diocese of Washington will meet in the Church of the Epiphany this afternoon for the annual convention of the Sunday School Institute.

The Rev. William H. Cole, S. T. M., specialist in church school work and author of several books on Bible classes, will address the first session at 5 p. m. Dinner will be served after his address. In the evening other diocesan organizations of the church will join with the Sunday School Institute in a mass meeting at which the "Forward Movement" of the Episcopal Church will be discussed by the Rev. Arthur M. Sherman.

Postoffice Employes Plan Halloween Ball

A Halloween ball will be held tomorrow night in the National Press Club Auditorium by members of Local No. 140, National Federation of Postoffice Employes.

Proceeds will go to the widows and orphans of former postal workers. Several members of Congress will be guests of honor.
